

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

AUTUMN ANNOUNCEMENT, 1894.

A. C. McClurg & Company,
CHICAGO.

England in the Nineteenth Century.

By ELIZABETH WORMELEY LATIMER. Author of "France in the Nineteenth Century," "Russia and Turkey in the Nineteenth Century," etc. Handsomely illustrated with twenty-five full-page, half-tone portraits, 8vo, 452 pages, $2.50.

Readers of "France in the Nineteenth Century," and of "Russia and Turkey in the Nineteenth Century," will welcome Mrs. Latimer's new volume. Mrs. Latimer is a woman of fine instincts, liberal culture, and unusual literary skill and experience. Visiting in England frequently for a long period of years, she had unusual opportunities to witness many of the events of which she writes. Her style is extremely entertaining and agreeable, and has all the attractiveness and spirit of an eye-witness. Like the other two works it is finely and profusely illustrated with portraits of the leading persons of the century.

My Lady.

By MARGUERITE BOUVET. Author of "Sweet William," "Prince Tiptop," "Little Marjorie's Love Story." Illustrated by HELEN and MARGARET ARMSTRONG. 16mo, $1.25.

This is a delightful story for adults from the same author who has already charmed the thousands who have read her favorite children's stories, "Sweet William," "Prince Tiptop," etc. It is a fine example of the power to tell a tale of tender love in pure Saxon English. Recounting the fortunes of French refugees to England in the days of the Revolution of '93 and of Bonaparte, it affords glimpses of life both in England and France. The English nurse who devotes her whole heart and life to the young heroine, and the young French marquis, whose love for the latter is so great and unselfish that he hides it on discovering that she loves his friend, are finely portrayed. The book is sure to increase its author's fame both by its fascination as a story and by its simple unaffected style.

Reminiscences of a Portrait Painter.

By GEORGE P. A. HEALY. Illustrated. 12mo, 221 pages, $1.50.

Lovers of contemporary history cannot but enjoy these reminiscences. Mr. Healy's fame as an artist brought him into contact with many of the most illustrious men and women both of Europe and America, and the magnetic force of his genial nature retained them as his intimate friends. He tells us, in charmingly easy style, of his gradual rise as a portrait painter, from the time when, as he says, he made a likeness of "Our Butcher" until commissions were sent to him from both sides of the Atlantic for portraits of Henry Clay, John Quincy Adams, Grant, Sherman, Lincoln, Louis Philippe, Princess Elizabeth of Roumania, Bismarck, Guizot, Pius IX., and other notables. To meet such persons outside of politics and strife, in the studio and at table, is a rich treat for the reader.

Tales from the Ægean.

By DEMETRIOS BIKELAS. Translated by LEONARD ECKSTEIN OPDYCKE. With an Introduction by HENRY ALONZO HUNTINGTON. 16mo, 258 pages, $1.00.

Eight beautiful little stories, originally written in modern Greek and now translated into English, make up his attractive volume. Mr. Bikelas, their author, ought to be better known in this country. He is, perhaps, the most popular living author in his own land, and his historical tale, "Loukis Laras," made so great a sensation when published at Athens about fifteen years ago, that it was translated into nearly every language of Europe, and his name is a household word among all who take an interest in the modern Greeks.

Of these tales some are sad, some imbued with a gentle humor,—cheerful rather than merry,—and all are rare and refined in sentiment. But their especial value lies in the realistic pictures they paint of Greek life in our own times,—its social customs, dress, courtship, and marriage.

Jewish Tales.

Translated from the French of LEOPOLD VON SACHER MASOCH by HARRIET LIEBER COHEN. 16mo, 317 pages, $1.00.

These highly entertaining prose idylls—racy, piquant, spirited—have already attained great popularity in France, and it is safe to predict for them a warm welcome in this land. While they delight their readers with their humor and pathos,—with their realistic pictures of human life, both in its comic and serious aspects, they have a special value of their own. For the Jew of former days, with his distinctive marks of hair, beard, dress, and customs, is fast passing away under the influence of modern innovations; and these tales will be prized as faithful pictures of the Jewish people's life in the good old times.

The Price of Peace.

A Story of the Times of Ahab, King of Israel. By A. W. ACKERMAN. 12mo, 390 pages, $1.25.

This book will be found intensely interesting because of the light it throws upon an eventful period in the history of the people of Israel. Dealing with the times of the weak-minded King Ahab and his idolatrous wife, Jezebel, it sets before the reader, in the attractive form of a tale, something of the domestic as well as the military life of those troublous times. Perhaps its most valuable feature is the carefully drawn and life-like portrait of a Bible character too little known; namely, Micaiah, the prophet who was courageous enough to tell the king, in the presence of his army and in contradiction of the flatteries of hundreds of false prophets, that his forces would be scattered and he himself slain in the coming battle with the Syrians.

The interest is greatly enhanced by the exquisitely pure love story that is interwoven with the stirring historical events.

The Crucifixion of Phillip Strong.

By CHARLES M. SHELDON. 12mo, 267 pages, $1.00.

A novel of unusual interest and timeliness which deals with the church and modern society. Phillip Strong, the hero, is an honest, forceful, courageous minister, who believes that he should not allow his church to be simply a social club. His efforts to stem the tide of luxury and of selfishness, his attempts in a series of sermons on Christ and Modern Society to place before his congregation the true Christian ideal, and their repudiation of it and him are told in a way that will hold the reader interested to the end. . . . A strong arraignment of a lethargic church, and a call to higher and better things.

In Bird Land.

By LEANDER S. KEYSER. 16mo, 269 pages, $1.25.

To the lover of Nature such a book as this is far superior to all the learned works on natural history, though they are valuable in their own place. Mr. Keyser spends much of his time among the birds because he loves them. The feathered folk of this land are his friends and acquaintances,—he has been present at their courtships, their quarrels, their marriages, and their schools; he sympathizes with them in their joys and sorrows, watches the training and notes the progress of the youngsters, and even interprets their language. In all the varied information it affords, it is exact and reliable.

The Power of an Endless Life.

By the Rev. THOMAS C. HALL. 16mo, 190 pages. $1.00.

All who had the privilege of listening to these sermons will give them a glad welcome in book form; and those who have yet to become acquainted with them, will find on doing so a warm-hearted and eloquent appeal to their spiritual life, as well as an abundance of the cheerful hope that should be the support of every Christian. The Christian life is here viewed in its various phases; and even the blind groping of the heathen after higher things is viewed hopefully. The work is eminently practical, non-sectarian and catholic in its teaching; and commends Christ, rather than any one of the "forms of godliness" in the Christian church, to the reader.

Things of the Mind.

By the Rt. Rev. J. L. SPALDING, Bishop of Peoria. Author of "Education and the Higher Life," etc., etc. 12mo, 237 pages, $1.00.

The essays which compose this book are characterized by an elevation of thought, and an earnestness of purpose, which are well adapted to stir the mind to noble impulses. Bishop Spalding is here in his chosen field, and writes in a delightfully clear and terse style of Education, Culture, Religion, and Patriotism. Essays of this character are all too rare, and they are to be welcomed for their tendency to draw the mind from things material to things spiritual.

Woman in Epigram.

Flashes of Wit, Wisdom and Satire, from the World's Literature. Compiled by FREDERICK W. MORTON. 16mo, 212 pages, $1.00.

The book is full of variety, wit, brilliancy, humor, and wise aphorisms. The aim has been to gather together in convenient form the best things said in praise or condemnation of women; and the sharp contrasts afforded will probably be found not less entertaining and instructive than the views advanced and the bright, epigrammatic form in which they are cast.

In Maiden Meditation.

By E. V. A. 16mo, 217 pages, $1.00; half morocco, $2.75; limp calf or morocco, $3.00.

"Here is a pleasant little volume of essays of the 'Ik Marvel' school and style, although up to date in thought, quotations and references. It is something of a revelation and a privilege for the 'gentle reader' to be thus led by a gentle maiden hand into many of the confidences of her thoughts both in society and in her boudoir. These thoughts are always chaste as well as bright. . . . The thoughts upon religion are sound and helpful. The argument against according women the right to propose is delicate, feminine, and conclusive. This bouquet of pretty essays is tied by these strings: 'After the Ball,' 'After Dinner,' 'After Church,' 'After a Wedding,' 'After One Summer.'"—The Evening Telegram, New York.

Polar Gleams.

An Account of a Voyage on the Yacht "Blencathra." By HELEN PEEL. Illustrated.
8vo, 211 pages, net $2.50.

This brightly written and entertaining account of a young woman's voyage in the comparatively unknown waters of the Arctic Sea to the mouth of the Yenesei River, helps to dispel many of the erroneous impressions held of the great continent of Siberia.

A Book of Heavenly Birthdays.

By E. V. B., Illustrated. 16mo, 218 pages, gilt top, vellum paper, in box, net, $1.50.

In this little work are brought together some of the choicest utterances of the best writers of all ages on the subject of the life hereafter. Among the quotations will be found many exquisite pieces from the greatest writers of all ages and countries, a number being from living authors. It is hoped that the little volume may prove acceptable to many who have friends gone before, and that in the words of the preface, "It may be that here and there a few lines, or some short poem, will go to the heart of the reader, and a chord that vibrates still to the remembered sound of a voice that is gone will answer to the poet's touch, and then a name or the date of an unforgetten day may sometimes be pencilled on the margin."

The Poet's Praise.

From Homer to Swinburne. Collected and arranged, with Notes by Estello Davenport
Adams. Crown, 8vo, gilt top, 407 pages, $2.00 net.

Excellent in execution and artistic in design. To literary people works like these are not only of value but most acceptable, and should be read by many. The extracts are intelligently arranged, and selected with judgment.

Paul and Virginia.

By BERNARDIN DE SAINT PIERRE. Newly translated by Prof. MELVILLE B. ANDERSON.
"Laurel-Crowned Tales." Finely printed and bound. 16mo, gilt top, $1.00.

Though St. Pierre's charming story of Paul and Virginia has been acknowledged to be not only the greatest work of its gifted author, but also one of the chefs d'œuvre of the French language, and though it has become a classic in every European tongue, yet the English translations of it that have appeared hitherto are in several respects unsatisfactory. One is so severely literal that, while the words are given, the spirit has fled; another, running to the opposite extreme, is garnished with phrases and conceits for which Bernardin de St. Pierre is in no degree responsible. It has therefore been deemed advisable to add to the series of "Laurel-Crowned Tales" a new translation of this tale by Professor M. B. Anderson, of Stanford University, California. Those who have read and enjoyed Mr. Anderson's translations of Boissier's "Madame de Sévigné," and other works, will expect something not only good, but excellent. They will find a translation very faithful and conscientious, yet lively and presented in good idiomatic English. In other words, the translator has been so careful to catch the author's spirit and meaning that the reader will find the charm of this classic prose idyl wonderfully preserved.

The Elizabethan Library.

A series of handy and tastefully printed little volumes, designed to bring the writings of some of the authors of the sixteenth century before the readers of the present day. 24mo, gilt top, per volume $1.25.

PUBLISHED THIS YEAR.

Green Pastures. Being Choice Extracts from the Works of Robert Greene, A. M., of both Universities, 1560 (?) 1592. Made by Alexander B. Grosart.

Although the writings of Robert Greene may not be so well known as some of the authors who have appeared in the Elizabethan Library, his genius places him high among the writers of his time. Among the extracts will be found some exquisite word-pictures of old English scenes, gems from his plays, much quaint humor, and many pithy proverbs and choice sayings that may have originated some of the proverbs we are using to-day.

"The Poet of Poets." The Love-Verse from the Minor Poems of Edmund Spenser. Alexander B. Grosart, Editor. With portrait.

The quantity of this pre-eminent singer's poetry is so vast that selection was inevitable. The editor believes that he has struck an acceptable medium in choosing Spenser's love-verse to represent him. As a collection of Spenser's choicest verse this little volume will be welcomed as a pocket-companion for a summer day, or a passing recreation by the winter fireside.

"Brave Translunary Things." From the Works in Prose and Verse of Ben Jonson. Selected by Alexander B. Grosart.

Ben Jonson was not only among the foremost of his age for genius and intellectual and scholarly resource and fineness of poetic art, but his voluminous writings lend themselves exceptionally well to selections such as this. For massiveness of intellect, for occasional splendor of imagination, for loveliness of fancy, for sudden charm of melody, for breadth of reading, for conscientiousness of workmanship, "rare Ben" stands second to no contemporary, save one.

The Friend of Sir Philip Sidney. Being Selections from the Works of Fulke Greville, Lord Brooke. Edited, with an Introduction, by Alexander B. Grosart.

The high esteem in which Lord Brooke's writings have been held by the capable, back to his own time, may be summed up in the words of Mr. George Saintsbury: "Perhaps it is not easy to find in all that generation of high-thinking and brilliantly-writing men any one who combines vivid expression with weighty thought more notably than Brooke does."

Country School in New England,

The. By Clifton Johnson. With 60 illustrations from photographs and drawings made by the author. 8vo, cloth....	2 50	p.te
---	------	------

This volume is so delightfully novel, quaint, picturesque, and so thoroughly informed with the fresh and unsophisticated spirit of childhood, that it inspires instant sympathy and appreciation. The author describes successive periods of the country school—in short, the every-day life of the boys and girls of rural New England. Every phase of his subject is aptly illustrated with pictures from life.

Deephaven.

By Sarah Orne Jewett. Holiday Edition. With about fifty illustrations from designs by Charles H. and Marcia O. Woodbury. Carefully printed and with an original and striking binding after designs by Mrs. Henry Whitman. Crown, 8vo.....

2 50 p.te

Miss Jewett may have written books as good as "Deephaven," but none has ever superseded this in the regard of those who read all her books with grateful delight. It offers many a salient situation to tempt an artist's pencil, and Mr. and Mrs. Woodbury have designed about fifty illustrations that harmonize admirably with the sketches—they not only illustrate its scenes and incidents, they indicate its tone and atmosphere. The binding is noteworthy for the originality of its design, and its pleasing color effect.

These popular poems are spirited in a rare degree; they are picturesque and graphic, and, withal, they have a grace and refinement which give them their crowning charm. They are arranged in chronological order, and all belong to a period which Mr. Howard Pyle is particularly happy in portraying. The book is full of delightful pictures of colonial and revolutionary life, and exquisite decorative borders appear on almost every page.

3 50 r.de

The extraordinary popularity of Goethe's "Faust" lies in the eternal interest of experiences familiar to all time, and in the appalling vividness of situations typical of human nature in all ages. No legend of the past has been so vitally woven into the life of the present. The artist, Mr. Gregory, has happily illustrated some of the thrilling and unforgettable scenes of "Faust" with an interpretative insight, which not only bears witness to his skill, but to the thralldom of this strangely absorbing and vividly picturesque tragedy of life.

"The story of 'France in the Nineteenth Century' as told by Mrs. Latimer is as absorbing as a work of fiction. Indeed, for rapid changes of front, for picturesque situations, remarkable vacillation of public opinion, no period of European history is more remarkable than this. . . . For telling situations and for startling effects she certainly does not lack. . . . She is always picturesque. In her analysis of character she displays a thorough mastery of her subject. . . . Mrs. Latimer has written an extremely interesting book, which will be read with interest."—The Daily Advertiser, Boston.

Edmondo de Amicis is one of the most prominent and most popular of the modern Italian men of letters. As a traveler he is enthusiastic and observant. He never misses anything worth seeing, and his observations are careful and trustworthy. Although he has a keen sense of humor, he is neither flippant nor undignified. His style is elegant, bright and animated, and his narrative is varied by amusing digressions. In "Holland" he is at his best, and the reader has not turned a dozen pages before he is on good terms with his genial companion and guide, whether he is telling of the Mausoleum of William the Silent or the pink cheeks of the Delft house-maids.

Charles Kingsley's famous romance of "Hypatia" has at last received costuming, so to speak, that enhances its charm as only artistic dress can enhance the charms of the beautiful human figure. It is not necessary at this time to speak of Mr. Kingsley's creation—that sympathetic figure of a gentle philosophy expressed in the perfect woman whose name gives to the romance its title. Her mental struggles, and her physical disaster, the sad barbaric ending of it all—these things are familiar to very many cultivated readers, but it is just to say, and it is almost one's duty to say, that few books that have ever been written lend themselves more naturally to such illustration as the publishers have given to this through the work of William Martin Johnson. It becomes necessary to re-read a famous book so admirably presented to the eye.

Mrs. Thaxter has spent a large part of her life on Appledore, the largest of the Isles of Shoals, and has a flower garden by her cottage which is one of the chief attractions of the islands and the wonder of the thousands who visit them every summer. In compliance with repeated importunities to tell how she succeeds so marvelously, she has written this book, which has quite enough practical information to aid the few whom information in such matters helps, and yet is charmingly permeated by the poetry of the flowers, the islands, and good literature. The illustrations reproduce the beauty and the blazing splendors of the garden, and the corner within the cottage where the hostess welcomes and charms those whom she delights to honor.

Marie Antoinette, The Life of.

Translated from the French of Maxime de la Rocheterie, by Cora Hamilton Bell. 2 vols., 8vo, with 20 photogravure portraits of the leading characters, 2 vols., crown 8vo..... 7 50 e.rc

This new life of Marie Antoinette, which has been crowned by the French Academy, will probably remain the standard life of the unfortunate queen. Owing to the recent discovery of a large mass of the correspondence of the Austrian ambassador at the French court, a flood of light has been thrown upon many points which have hitherto been matters of conjecture alone. Nowhere has been presented a more graphic and vivid account of this unfortunate woman, who passed through every stage of suffering, and from being the idol of the people came to an ignominious death upon the guillotine.

A companion book to the popular "Queen of the Adriatic" by the same author, who has written a series of bright and picturesque chapters on one of the most beautiful cities of the Italian coast—a city whose history is replete with dramatic interest, and closely associated with events that have shaped the course of European history.

So
I sent my Soul through the Invisible,
Some letter of that After-life to spell:
And by and by my Soul return'd to me,
And answer'd "I Myself am Heav'n and Hell"
Heav'n but the Vision of fulfill'd Desire,
And Hell the Shadow of a Soul on fire,
Cast on the Darkness into which Ourselves,
So late emerg'd from, shall so soon expire.

The famous "History of New York," by Diedrich Knickerbocker, was first published in 1809. The mystery concerning the disappearance of old Dr. Knickerbocker, to whom the authorship of the work was assigned, the finding of the manuscript among his effects, and the sale of the same by the innkeeper in order to secure settlement of its author's indebtedness, continued for a number of months to mystify the public. When Irving was finally announced as the author, it was at first not easy to convince his fellow New Yorkers that a work giving evidence of such maturity of literary power, and the humor of which had taken the city by storm, could have been produced by one who had heretofore been known only as a young man about town, and rather unsuccessful lawyer. The success of the work on the other side of the Atlantic was also immediate, and Sir Walter Scott spoke for many British readers when he wrote of "That most excellently jocular History of New York over which our sides have been absolutely sore with laughing."

"The Old Garden" has, ever since its publication, enjoyed a very unusual degree of popular favor. The subjects of the poems appeal to lovers of nature. They lend themselves admirably to decorative illustration, when applied by a master like Mr. Walter Crane. His designs for these poems are simply exquisite. He has never done anything more attractive or more artistic.

This work contains what is considered the most remarkable specimens of wood-engraving ever made. Each of the pictures in the collection was cut by the engraver in the presence of the original painting, Mr. Cole's method being to photograph the painting upon the block, and then to engrave it in the gallery before the picture itself. In addition to Mr. Stillman's text, the engraver furnishes brief but interesting comments on the paintings reproduced.

Pictures from Nature and Life.

Poems by Kate Raworth Holmes. Illustrated by Helen E. Stevenson. Small 4to..... 2 50 p.ue

One of the finest books of poetry that have appeared during the holiday season is "Pictures from Nature and Life." The verses are well written, and are filled with bright thoughts and fancies, while no less admiration will be bestowed on the artistic work. Each poem is done in a different style of fancy lettering, with here and there designs of flowers and leaves. These are interspersed with reproductions of photographs of buildings, landscapes, persons—the nature and life referred to in the lines. "One Fair Day" recounts the wanderings and romantic musings of a happy pair of lovers. "My Lady" is a pretty, sentimental poem, while "The Waif" is a bright sketch. "The Bride" is marked by true and tender sentiment.—The School Journal, New York.

"The work is an excellent one, its references and quotations being judiciously selected from reliable sources, and it is an interesting and readable story in its every part. Poland, Servia, Roumania and other collateral governments are presented in their proper sequence, forming in the story a well-balanced and harmonious whole. The volume is praiseworthy in that it presents to us in concise and interesting form much information of value to us, the political opposite of the Muscovite form of government. The work is admirably printed, and is embellished with many full-page portraits which add much to the value of the text."—The Boston Times.

The first volume covers that portion of Switzerland where the French and Italian languages are spoken, and the second the German-speaking cantons. It has been Mr. McCrackan's aim to picture the real Switzerland and its people as they are, divested of the glamour of romance. His book will neither be a guide-book, nor the old-fashioned routine book of travel, made up of transcripts from diaries or hastily written letters to indulgent friends. It will rather be a series of individual sketches, covering not only the salient points of attraction, but many places of interest out of the beaten track of the average tourist.

White and gold..... 1 25 ld
"The Wedding Garment" tells the story of the continued existence of a young man after his death, or departure from the natural world. The book is written in a reverential spirit; it is unique and quite unlike any story of the same type heretofore published, full of telling incidents and dramatic situations, and not merely a record of the doings of sexless "shades," but of living human beings.

What Makes a Friend?

By Volney Streamer. Second edition. Uniform with "In Friendship's Name."..... Retail. 1 25 Net. te
"The compiler of these dainty monographs, has made a very discriminating levy on literature for his testimonials to the sacred theme of friendship. He has skillfully avoided the rather trite sayings that sprinkle the volume of "Familiar Quotations," but has gleaned his tributes away from the beaten path. They have a rich lustre of pure gold, and should strengthen the reverence for the rich and rare quality of friendship."—The Inter-Ocean, Chicago.

A series of graceful and exquisite verses in praise of our familiar wild flowers. A well-known writer says of them, "I would to all the nine muses that our songsters and rhymsters could give us always something as pure as these sonnets. No one could have written them who did not comprehend nature. There is no mistake about the author's being a botanist, a lover of nature's accuracies; she has the skill of a collector, as well as the music of a singer, and the eye of a poet."

"Mr. Partridge is thoughtful, forceful, and sincere, and he has put his thoughtfulness, forcefulness, and sincerity into this book, and for this reason the essays it contains are interesting as discourses and valuable as arguments. The book is a plea for a more general art culture, for a higher refinement, and for a bringing out of that which is noblest in our people, trusting and believing that the outcome will be an American school of art that will express the highest and noblest life and spirit, as did the grand art of the Greeks during the era of their highest culture, refinement, and nobility."—Boston Traveller.

This may be said to be a companion volume to the same author's Genesis of Art-Form . In the latter, attention was directed to the practical methods through which products in the different arts are made to manifest characteristics recognized to be essential. The present volume embraces a theoretical discussion of the reasons why they are essential, this book, though published later, being an introduction to the whole general subject.

LADY LOUISA MANNERS, COUNTESS DYSART.

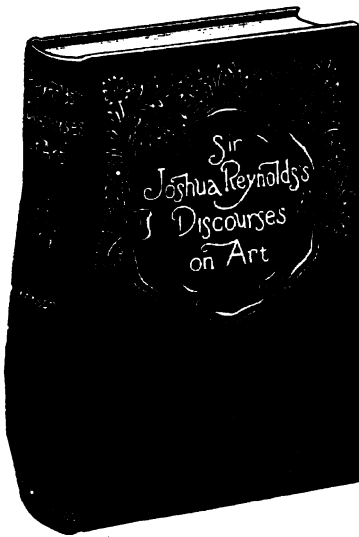

From "Reynolds' Discourses on Art." A. C. McClurg & Co.

Reminiscences of a Portrait Painter.

By G. P. A. Healy. With illustrations after the original paintings, by Mr. Healy. 12mo, 221 pages

1 50 ye

Lovers of contemporary history cannot but enjoy these reminiscences. Mr. Healy's fame as an artist brought him into contact with many of the most illustrious men and women both of Europe and America, and the magnetic force of his genial nature retained them as his intimate friends. He tells us, in charmingly easy style, of his gradual rise as a portrait painter, from the time when, as he says, he made a likeness of "Our Butcher," until commissions were sent to him for portraits of Henry Clay, John Quincy Adams, Lincoln, Grant, Sherman, Louis Philippe, Bismarck, Guizot, Pius IX. and other rulers, statesmen and soldiers. To meet such persons outside of politics and strife, in the studio and at table, is a rich treat for the reader.

"Mr. Arnold has accomplished his task wonderfully well. There is a striking absence of personal bias; and if he has succeeded in removing some of the blots upon the character of Benedict Arnold, the impartial reader cannot but think that he is justified, and respect him for his denunciation of treason, while he mentions that the traitor was a man, and possessed at one time of a noble character. The book is notable for the range of historical information displayed."—The Traveller, Boston.

"Mr. Adams's book is a distinct addition to biographical literature. It brings before us, not the traditional Jane Austen, but a bright, vivacious, charming woman, unselfish, kindly, warm-hearted, and devoted in all the relations of life; a healthy, unspoiled, and thoroughly attractive English girl. The story of this uneventful but active life is delightfully told by Mr. Adams. His style has the quietness and repose of the old time. It is in entire harmony with the career which it describes."—The Christian Union, New York.

The daughter of Edwin Booth, Mrs. Edwina Booth Grossman, has prepared this volume of recollections of her famous father, which contains in addition to his daughter's reminiscences a great number of letters written by Mr. Booth to her and to his friends. These letters give a charming glimpse of Booth as a husband and a father. They are simple and unaffected, and convey a more intimate knowledge of the character of the man than could be gained from any other memoir. This book is illustrated with a number of photogravures, reproductions of portraits of the great actor.

Mr. Church considers Cromwell as "perhaps the most startling, certainly the most unique, figure in the whole pageantry of English history." And yet it seemed to him, in spite of the large amount of literature which already exists on the Cromwellian period, that no adequate book on Cromwell and on the events which made his extraordinary career possible, had been written. In the large general histories it is the story of England rather than the story of Cromwell, and in them the Protector appears as one of many figures in a stirring period and not as the foremost man of his age. And in the special biographies the thread is taken up, in effect, at the opening of the Long Parliament, and the important political and religious features which produced that Parliament have not as yet been treated with any too much fullness.

The most notable of the addresses made within recent years by the most popular of American orators and prince of after dinner speakers, are now collected and presented to the public in this beautiful volume. The range of topics covered by his speeches is wide, the occasions of their utterance being as different as the nomination of a President and the meeting of a farmers' club. The biographical introduction is by Mr. J. B. Gilder, and the latest portrait of Mr. Depew, by Baron, serves as frontispiece.

De Gontaut, Memoirs of the Duchesse.

Translated from the French by Mrs. J. W. Davis, in two volumes, 8vo, illustrated with 12 portraits in photogravure, in cloth with gilt top. $5 00 u.es

The Memoirs of the Duchesse De Gontaut were written by the author when she was eighty years old, and her recollections cover a period of more than fifty years. She knew personally both Napoleon I. and the Duke of Wellington, and all the lesser personages in both France and England who figured in the dramatic period, beginning with the French Revolution and extending down to the Restoration of the French Monarchy. Her Memoirs are charming in style and full of reminiscence and heretofore unrecorded anecdotes.

Edison, Life and Inventions of.

By W. K. L. and Antonio Dickson. With 250 illustrations. Quarto, cloth, gilt top. 5 00 u.ud

No inventor of modern times has awakened a keener popular interest than Thomas A. Edison, often called "the wizard of Menlo Park." The romance of his early life, the rapid succession of his wonderful discoveries in the realm of electrical science, his almost uninterrupted series of successes, have kept him before the public not only with the glamour of the accomplished, but also with the zest of the keenly expected. The authors of this biography have been permitted to write the first complete and authentic story of this great American inventor. They have been from the first in close touch with the man himself, and have had the benefit of his aid in describing the making and use of his inventions. It is brought down to the immediate present, even including a description of the Kinetograph.

This series forms one of the most notable collections of books that has been published for many years. The success it has met with since the first volume was issued, and the widespread attention it has attracted, indicate that it has satisfactorily fulfilled its purpose, viz., to provide in a popular form and moderate compass the records of the lives of men who have been conspicuously eminent in the great conflicts that established American independence and maintained our national integrity and unity. Each biography has been written by an author especially well qualified for the task, and the result is not only a series of fascinating stories of the lives and deeds of great men, but a rich mine of valuable information for the student of American history and biography.

Lord Loftus speaks of his Reminiscences as "a faithful historical account of events which have come under my personal notice, and in some of which I have been an actor." It is this faithful historical account which gives the work its highest value. Light is thrown on the secret history of all the important transactions of the period of which the volumes treat, making them a mine of valuable information. The second series covers the eventful period from 1862 to 1879, which is chronicled in a style as attractive as the subject is full of interest.

Retail. Net.

$8 00 e.ns

No volumes announced for appearance this season have been expected with more eagerness than these notable ones. The letters, chiefly familiar, cover a wide range in Mr. Lowell's friendships and career. Among the letters are those to Henry W. Longfellow, Ralph Waldo Emerson, Thomas Hughes, W. D. Howells, C. F. Briggs, Nathaniel Hawthorne, Leslie Stephen, Thomas Bailey Aldrich, Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes, Mrs. J. T. Fields, J. L. Motley, including the editor of the work, and many other lifelong friends of the dead poet. We have in these letters the man, the friend, the poet, and the deep thinker; every phase of a noble personality, the truthful self-portraiture of a sincere and lofty nature, growing riper and better and richer from day to day, and year by year. A nature singularly unspoiled by success, will be known through these letters quite as widely as those who knew him best could wish.

*Reminiscences of a Portrait Painter.

By G. P. A. Healy. With illustrations after the original paintings by Mr. Healy. 12mo, 221 pages..... 1 50 yl

Lovers of contemporary history cannot but enjoy these reminiscences. Mr. Healy's fame as an artist brought him into contact with many of the most illustrious men and women, both of Europe and America, and the magnetic force of his genial nature retained them as his intimate friends. He tells us in charmingly easy style of his gradual rise as a portrait painter, from the time when, as he says, he made a likeness of "Our Butcher," until commissions were sent to him for portraits of Henry Clay, John Quincy Adams, Lincoln, Grant, Sherman, Louis Philippe, Bismarck, Guisot, Pius IX., and other rulers, statesmen and soldiers. To meet such persons outside of politics and strife, in the studio and at table, is a rich treat for the reader.

"Not only the admirers and lovers of John Ruskin, but those as well who have not counted themselves his disciples, will go far before they will find a biography more thoroughly fascinating than this by Mr. Collingwood, which needs none of the excuses generally made for biographies written in the lifetime of their subjects. Mr. Collingwood has undoubtedly produced one of the most admirable biographies of recent times. The numerous portraits of Mr. Ruskin, the views of his various residences, and a number of reproductions of Mr. Ruskin's own sketches, well match the other details of two volumes finely printed and elegantly bound."—The Literary World.

By Georg Ebers. With portraits. 16mo. 1 25 il

For many years Dr. Ebers has kept his hold upon the reading public, and has strengthened it with every book. But the personality of this creator of the romance of the past has until now been veiled. The author here tells of his student life in Germany, his association with movements like that for the establishment of kindergarten training, his acquaintance with men like Froebel and the brothers Grimm, his experiences in the revolutionary period, his interest in Egyptology and the history of ancient Greece and Rome, and the beginnings of his literary career. It is a book of historical as well as personal interest.

This is the authorized biography of Mr. Whittier, arranged for while he was yet living. Mr. Pickard was closely connected with him, enjoyed his full confidence, and was entrusted with all available material for his Life. He has produced a work which the lovers of Whittier will welcome with sincere gratitude. He tells the story of Whittier as the shy Quaker boy; as feeling the impulse, and steadily increasing in the power, to express himself in verse; as becoming a clarion voice in the great struggle for freedom, then a pure and uplifting voice in uttering the highest human aspirations, commanding the heartiest respect and winning the sincerest affection of the nation.

*Winslow, Anna Green.

The Diary of a Boston School Girl of 1771. Edited, with a preface and many notes, by Alice Morse Earle, author of "Customs and Fashions in Old New England," etc. With illustrations, including a facsimile of the Diary, a miniature of the school-girl, portraits, etc. With quaint antique cover design. 12mo.

1 25 11

Anna Green Winslow, a bright girl of twelve, was sent to Boston from her home in Cumberland, Nova Scotia, in 1771, to be "finished." While in Boston she kept a diary, which naturally contained interesting items about her cloaks, bonnets, and other apparel; about Sunday sermons and Thursday lectures; and, much more to her liking, parties and dances. Mrs. Earle, who is an expert in old New England life and customs, furnishes an interesting preface and many helpful notes, which, with the illustrations, make the book peculiarly and unusually attractive.

Springstead. 16mo, cloth, ornamental. 1 00 ts

The papers included in this useful little manual are intended rather as a working model than as a set of arbitrary rules. The author has endeavored to lay down no rule that has not a good reason for its existence. Among the subjects treated are the duties of a waitress at various meals, the care of the dining-room and pantry, the proper ways of caring for silver, lamps, etc., and many other important household details.

Mr. Scudder has undertaken in this study to pass in review the literatures of Greece and Rome and Judea, the legends and art of the middle ages, and the literature and art of modern times, to discover if possible the meaning of the appearance and disappearance of childhood as a subject for poets, romancers, and artists. The book is thus a criticism of literature and art from a new point of view, and Mr. Scudder's name is sufficient assurance that it is done with ample knowledge and excellent skill.

At the very least, they will be sure of entertainment. And Mr. Lang is none the less entertaining because, though he very properly insists on the fairness of subjecting ghost stories to the same grave logical scrutiny which we apply to ordinary scientific phenomena, he does not always take his ghosts too seriously. . . . It is needless to say that for the comparative study of the subject there is no living guide as completely equipped as Mr. Lang. *Crumbling Idols.

Twelve Essays on Art, dealing chiefly with Literature, Painting and the Drama. 16mo.

Retail. Net.
$1 25 p.pu

A collection of some of Mr. Garland's essays, which attracted so much attention on their appearance in magazine form. Taken as a whole, the book is a vigorous plea for the recognition of youth. The creeds of past generations are useless guides for living men, and reverence for old unworthiness is no great virtue. The prestige of antiquity is not a justification for the eternal distinction of masters that are dead and ideas naturally out-lived. Modernity is not a crime, new life will do no harm to weakening art; young men have qualities for which old men grew famous, and they protest against the despotism of tradition.

Those who know Mr. Curtis only by the unrivaled, graceful fancies in "Proe and I," and in the "Lotus Eaters," will find in "Orations and Addresses" another side of this famous man—showing his powerful intellect, and his perfect knowledge of the needs of his countrymen in the vital interests of civil government. Instinctively right, and with the courage of his convictions, he was always found at the front battling for purity of action in public affairs. In his social addresses he was no less remarkable, as it was said that as an after-dinner speaker he could only be compared with himself.

A series of handy and tastefully printed little volumes, designed to bring the writings of some of the noble but little known authors of the sixteenth century before readers of the present day. The volumes are all printed in old-face type, on antique paper, in the 24mo size so characteristic of the sixteenth century, and are appropriately bound in the style of the Tudor period.

A Cabinet of Gems. Cut and Polished by Sir Philip Sidney; now, for the more radiance, presented with their setting by George Macdonald. With portrait.

"Here indeed is 'a box where sweets compacted lie,' a real pocket-companion, a vinaigrette for the soul."—The Daily Chronicle, London.

Choice Passages from the Writings of Sir Walter Raleigh. Being a Small Sheaf of Gleanings from a Golden Harvest. By Alexander B. Grosart. With portrait.

This volume is an endeavor to bring together representative quotations from Raleigh, whereby to illustrate his distinction of style, the stately march of his sentences, his cultured allusiveness, and the lights and shadows of his many-sided and splendid career.

A Bower of Delights. Being Interwoven Verse and Prose from the works of Nicholas Breton. The Weaver: Alexander B. Grosart. With an Introduction on his Life, and the Characteristics of his Writings.

"Breton has many a thought well expressed in melodious meter, and many a pretty image and delicate verse to make him amply worth the reading; and his prose is delightful in its freshness and pointed neatness."—St. James's Gazette, London.

"Thoughts that Breathe and Words that Burn." From the Writings of Francis Bacon. Selected by Alexander B. Grosart. With portrait.

The very suggestive title of this book indicates, in some measure the richness of its contents. The selections are what Bacon hoped his Essays might be—"grains of salt that will rather give an appetite than offend with satiety."

Green Pastures. Being Choice Extracts from the Works of Robert Greene, A.M., of both Universities, 1560 (?) 1592. Made by Alexander B. Grosart.

Although the writings of Robert Greene may not be so well known as some of the authors who have appeared in the Elizabethan Library, his genius places him high among the writers of his time. Among the extracts will be found some exquisite word-pictures of old English scenes, gems from his plays, much quaint humor, and many pithy proverbs and choice sayings that may have originated some of the proverbs we are using to-day.

"The Poet of Poets." The Love-Verses from the Minor Poems of Edmund Spenser. Alexander B. Grosart, Editor. With portrait.

The quantity of this pre-eminent singer's poetry is so vast, that selection was inevitable. The editor believes that he has struck an acceptable medium in choosing Spenser's love-verses to represent him. As a collection of Spenser's choicest verses this little volume will be welcomed as a pocket-companion for a summer day, or a passing recreation by the winter fireside.

"Brave Translunary Things." From the Works in Prose and Verse of Ben Jonson. Selected by Alexander B. Grosart.

Ben Jonson was not only among the foremost of his age for genius and intellectual and scholarly resource and fineness of poetic art, but his voluminous writings lend themselves exceptionally well to selections such as this. For massiveness of intellect, for occasional splendor of imagination, for loveliness of fancy, for sudden charm of melody, for breadth of reading, for conscientiousness of workmanship, "rare Ben" stands second to no contemporary, save one.

The Friend of Sir Philip Sidney. Being Selections from the Works of Fulke Greville Lord Brooke. Edited, with an Introduction, by Alexander B. Grosart.

The high esteem in which Lord Brooke's writings have been held by the capable, back to his own time, may be summed up in the words of Mr. George Saintsbury: "Perhaps it is not easy to find in all that generation of high-thinking and brilliantly-writing men any one who combines vivid expression with weighty thought more notably than Brooke does."

--	------	----

These celebrated lectures, delivered by their authors in England, Scotland and America, and first published in 1853, have ever held a place in the front rank of English literature, and have won the admiration of all who have read them. This they do, not only because of their unaffected simplicity and naturalness, but also because they give an idea of the great English writers and humorists, such as Swift, Pope, Fielding, and Goldsmith, that can nowhere else be obtained.

By Frank Bolles, author of "At the North of Bearcamp Water." 16mo. . . . 1 25 ll

Speaking of the second paper, when it appeared in the Atlantic Monthly, the New York Evangelist remarked that "Mr. Bolles' feeling for nature was so sincere and so refined that every new word of his makes the sadness of his loss the keener." The readers of Mr. Bolles' former books, while heartily sympathizing with this remark, will be grateful that we are to have another book from him so attractive and varied in character, so marked by fine observation in several localities and in the section of the Provinces in which he traveled in the summer of 1893, so full of "the sense and the soul of nature."

"Here is a pleasant little volume of essays of the 'Ik Marvel' school and style, although up to date in thought, quotations, and references. It is something of a revelation and a privilege for the 'gentle reader' to be thus led by a gentle maiden hand into many of the confidences of her thoughts both in society and in her boudoir. These thoughts are always chaste as well as bright."—The Evening Telegram, New York.

Speaking of Miss Repplier's "Essays in Idleness," the London Spectator said: "They have all the lightness of touch, all the fullness of matter and grace of manner that go to make up the best work of the kind." And Mr. Le Gallienne, writing in the London Star, remarked: "Of their kind, a very entertaining kind: no one just now is writing better books than Miss Repplier." It is sufficient to say that her new book is in independence of thought and charming qualities of style very like her previous delightful books.

This a most careful and peculiarly complete study of the Jew as a type, an influence, and a "problem" of increasing importance in the history of civilization. The author makes a powerful plea for the fullest measure of respect and fraternity which can be shown the Jew to-day, and he also urges such a course as an aid to that wider liberty of thought and action which is due to the less fortunate types of the widely-scattered Hebrew race.

The Best Letters of Percy Bysshe Shelley. Edited, with an Introduction, by Shirley Carter Hughson.

"There is a grace of expression, a beauty of sentiment, a touch of quick, deep feeling that mark them with the warmth and exquisite charm of the poet's soul, and make us wonder whether he excels in prose or poem."—Public Opinion, Washington.

The Best Letters of William Cowper. Edited, with an Introduction, by Anna Benneson McMahan.

"Cowper might be called, with little exaggeration, the prince of letter-writers, so elegant and classic are his epistles. Apart from their literary charm, these letters give a more satisfactory picture of the man than any "Life" of him that has yet been written."—The Daily Advertiser, Boston.

This series comprises translations of single masterpieces by some of the best-known European writers, some of which have never before been presented in an English dress. The volumes are well printed on good paper, and very prettily bound.

Doctor Antonio. By Giovanni D. Ruffini. 1 vol.

"Doctor Antonio" was the popular work of its gifted author, who wrote it in exile, after sharing the vicissitudes of the political troubles of his day in Italy. The true and touching interest of the story would carry a reader through a much heavier medium. . . . The outline of the story is simple; it derives its charms from the grace and delicacy with which the details are filled in, and the strong individuality impressed upon every point of character, scenery or incident.

The Morals and Manners of the XVII. Century. Being the characters of La Bruyère. Translated by Helen Stott. Portrait. 1 vol.

"La Bruyère is in prose what Racine is in verse—the quintessence of the classical style of the French seventeenth century."—The Athenæum, London.

Goethe's Wilhelm Meister's Apprenticeship and Travels. Translated by Thomas Carlyle. With Critical Introduction by Edward Dowden, LL. D., Professor of English Literature in the University of Dublin. Edited, with notes, by Clement K. Shorter. Portrait. 2 vols.

"To this day," says Matthew Arnold, "such is the force of youthful associations, I read the 'Wilhelm Meister' with more pleasure in Carlyle's translation than in the original."

Portraits of Men. By C. A. Sainte-Beuve. Translated by Forsyth Edeveain. With Critical Memoir by William Sharp. Portrait. 1 vol.

Mr. William Sharp says of this sovereign critic: "It is conceivable that the future historian of our age will allot to Sainte-Beuve, a place higher even than that claimed for him by one or two of our ablest critics, Matthew Arnold in particular, and Mr. John Morley."

Portraits of Women. By C. A. Sainte-Beuve. Translated by Helen Stott. Portrait. 1 vol.

"The essays on Meadames de Maintenon, de Sévigné, de Stael, and de La Fayette, with those on Marie Antoinette and John of Arc, can never be read in any form without delight and profit."—The Athenæum, London.

Novalis (Friedrich von Hardenberg), His Life, Thoughts and Works. Edited and translated by M. J. Hope. 1 vol.

"Novalis," says Carlyle, "is a figure of such importance in German literature that no student can pass him by. . . . A man of the most indisputable talent, poetical and philosophical."

Imbued with the virility and vigor of our democratic era, Mr. Mabie has entered the modern critical movement and has immensely deepened and freshened for us the feeling toward literature, and intensified the relation which it bears to life. As an exponent of the spiritual element in criticism, perhaps none of our later writers has absorbed so completely this spiritual atmosphere.

"Admirable in form for the order, clearness, and compactness of presentation. For the rapid reader who cannot study philosophy at first hand, there is no book in the English language which would put him so quickly at the right point of view in order to see the meaning of systems and their relations to one another. The plan is so clear and the right information is so succinctly given that one gets a bird's-eye view with little effort. . . . It is particularly to be recommended to those readers who, having the works of some one philosopher, embrace his system with ardor, in entire ignorance of the fact that it is only one among many which may claim his attention, and challenge his thought."— The Christian Register , Boston.

This volume has the initial attractiveness of a novelty of topic, which indeed is almost startlingly interesting. Mr. Hutton's large collection of casts of the faces of eminent men and women, of all types and epochs, has long been famous in the circle of his private acquaintance, and can be catalogued as unique in its scope and dignity. A brief history and survey of it is here afforded the public, the profuse illustrations adding a most essential aid to the reader's study of them. The text is pleasant reading—reminiscences and biographic notes and comments furnishing forth part of it. By all those intelligently interested in physiognomy and phrenology Mr. Hutton's volume should be carefully considered.

These Essays are characterized by an elevation of thought, and an earnestness of purpose which are well adapted to stir the mind to nobler impulses. Bishop Spalding writes in a delightfully clear and terse style of Education, Culture, Religion and Patriotism. Here are twenty essays, a few of them in verse, all breathing the love of Nature, and pervaded by a sweetness, restfulness, and simplicity, that make them very attractive. The author recommends quiet walks in the country, and a loving observation of the processes of Nature, as a cure for unhealthy introspection, to say nothing of ennui and dyspepsia. Next to taking such walks, we should say, would be the reading of such essays as this.—Portland Transcript.

Flashes of Wit, Wisdom and Satire, from the World's Literature. Compiled by Frederick W. Morton. 12mo. | 1 00 | ne |
| Literature is full of opinions, wise or otherwise, on woman's nature and character, but thinkers have been prone to sin on the side of panegyric or willful libel. This book advances no theories. It simply furnishes the raw material for theorizing by supplying some of the opinions or guesses of men about women and of women about themselves. The reader will find variety, wit, brilliancy, humor and wise aphorisms. The aim has been to gather together in convenient form the best things said in praise or condemnation of women, and the sharp contrast afforded will probably be found not less entertaining and instructive than the views advanced, and the bright epigrammatic form in which they are cast. | | |

*Abandoning an Adopted Farm.

By Kate Sanborn, author of "Adopting an Abandoned Farm." 12mo. 75 eu

As a promoter of good spirits, a contributor to the gaiety of nations, Miss Kate Sanborn has gained a most enviable place among the writers of the day. Everybody laughed over her "Adoption" of her farm. Her "Abandonment" is, if possible more vivacious and entertaining, and in view of the large sales of her former book, the new story of her extraordinary visitors, her agricultural misadventures, and the reasons for her flitting, seems certain to prove one of the most popular books of the season.

*Abbe Daniel, The.

By André Theuriet. Translated by Helen B. Dole. Fully illustrated. 16mo, cloth, gilt top. 1 00 nt

"The Abbé Daniel" is a charming idyl of French country home life, in which the interest lies in the romantic love of the Abbé Daniel's protégé for the daughter of his former sweetheart, for whose defection he had, indeed, out of disappointment, entered the church. The characters are most vividly portrayed, and, from the very beginning, arouse the keenest interest and sympathy. The scenery is painted with a masterly hand, and the style is simply exquisite.

A story of contemporary New York society—"deliciously modern in its sketching of the everlasting woman's question." This story, which has just completed a successful course in the Century Magazine, touches a deeper chord than any of Mrs. Harrison's previous works. It is the history of a pure and noble woman, animated with a desire to benefit her sex, and dazzled by the prospect of a higher womanhood, yet hardly understanding the things to be accomplished or the means of their accomplishment. The story moves rapidly from first to last, introducing the reader to fashionable New York drawing rooms, the "swell" clubs, and to the fads of metropolitan society, yet at no time losing sight of the great truth that animates the book.

Balliff of Tewkesbury, The.

By C. E. D. Phelps and Leigh North. Illustrated, 12mo. Retail. Net.
$1 00 ne

This is an unusually clever and attractive story of English life in the last half of the sixteenth century, the scene being laid in and about Tewkesbury and Stratford-on-Avon. Shakespeare, as a young man, is introduced as one of the characters, with much skill and with perfect propriety. Will Helms, identified with that "W. H." who is immortalized in Shakespeare's dedication to his sonnets, and Sir Thomas Lucy, often anathematized by young Shakespearean enthusiasts, are also introduced as characters. It is a story of incident, the action is vigorous, the descriptions are vivid and truthful, the interest is well sustained, and the atmosphere is sweet and wholesome.

Balcony Stories.

Bavou Folk.

By Kate Chopin. 16mo. 1 25 ll

Under this title, Mrs. Chopin has gathered a small volume containing several tales drawn from life among the Creoles and Acadians of Louisiana. They are manifestly faithful yet spirited representations of characters and customs unfamiliar to far the larger part of the country, but picturesque and altogether worthy of description and literary preservation. The dialect of these semi-aliens is given, but not at such length as to be tedious; and it distinctly aids in imparting to the stories a genuine "local color." These stories are quite out of the beaten track of American tales, and cannot fail to attract much attention.

The wondrous power of Currer Bell's stories consists in their fiery insight into the human heart, their merciless dissection of passion, and their stern analysis of character and motive. The style of these productions possesses incredible force, sometimes almost grim in its bare severity, then relapsing into passages of melting pathos—always direct, natural and effective in its unpretending strength.

Her novels are real stories of real life, and historically just; they bring out the heroic, like the romances of the Middle Ages." This description of her novels applies with equal force to the seven stories which are grouped in her new book. Each is a strong, graphic picture of human life under circum-

*Cœur d'Alene.

By Mary Hallock Foote. 16mo..... 1 25 1l

Mrs. Foote is easily first of our novelists who take for their scenes the new communities formed among the Rocky Mountain States. Her intimate knowledge of the country, the motley aggregations of "all sorts and conditions of men" and women, the life they lead, and the dramatic situations possible or inevitable, enables her to tell stories of peculiar and original interest, which is greatly enhanced by her artistic and refined narration. Her new book relates to the riots in the Cœur d'Alene mines in 1892, and includes an engaging love story.

*Dancing Faun, The.

By Florence Farr. With title page by Aubrey Beardsley. 16mo, cloth.... 1 00 nt

A clever and original story, evidently based on original observation of life. The surprise at the end is admirably managed, and the daring philosophy of murder which Miss Farr thus indicates, makes a striking moral for the book, which is sure to attract notice and criticism.

*Daughter of To-day, A.

By Mrs. Everard Cotes (Sara Jeannette Duncan), author of "A Social Departure." 12mo, cloth.	1 50	p.se

Few literary débutantes have met with the success obtained by Sara Jeannette Duncan's first book, "A Social Departure." Her succeeding books showed the same powers of quick observation and graphic description, the same ability to identify and portray types. Meantime, the author has greatly enlarged her range of experience and knowledge of the world. A true cosmopolite, London, Paris and Calcutta have become familiar to her, as well as New York and Montreal. The title of her new book is no misnomer, and the author's vigorous treatment of her theme has given us a book distinguished not only by acute study of character, command of local color, and dramatic force, but also by contemporaneous interest. This novel is Mrs. Cotes's most advanced and most important literary work.

"Edna Lyall's new story is one of her best. It is a story of Irish agitation in which the Fenian movement and the dynamite movement as well, play a part. It has, naturally, enough of tragedy to make it intensely interesting without being sensational in any offensive sense. The heroine, Doreen, is a delightful character study, strong, lovable, womanly, and genuinely Irish. Miss Bayly is a conscientious writer, imbued with deep feeling, a high purpose, and her style is attractive and pure."—Boston Daily Advertiser.

LARRY. 12mo..... 1 00 ts

Miss Douglas's fiction is always much admired and loved. To begin with, she always introduces us to characters that we like to associate with. She does not seem to expend much energy in giving us psychological analyses of her characters, but manages to call out our hearts to them, drawing us to them as we are drawn by living personalities. Her plots are always ingenious and full of interest, and incidents and situations follow each other swiftly.

The "Red Lamp," the trade-mark, as it were, of the English country surgeon's office, is the central point of these dramatic stories of professional life. There are no secrets for the surgeon, and a surgeon himself, as well as a novelist, the author has made a most artistic use of the motives and springs of action revealed to him in a field of which he is the master.

Graceful, descriptive bits of artistic wandering, from the hands of the painters, have appeared in our magazines for some years past, but it remained for Mr. Du Maurier to take the headlong plunge into that unknown realm where fancy dwells. If it be true, as has been stated, that he once was modestly distrustful of his penwork, then "Peter Ibbetson" must now be one of the most petted members of the author's family, for so thoroughly has it been welcomed that no doubt exists as to the exceedingly fine quality of this, his first literary child.

But of "Trilby" what can be said that shall be within bounds? As a story it indicates the possession of a power that is given to the chosen few, and to them it comes only after a long struggle with the muses. No finer characterization, no truer picture of Parisian life—especially the student side of it—has ever been drawn. And what could be more delightful than some of the side rambles in this remarkable book?—take the little essay on the eye, for example. As for Trilby!—who has not a soft spot in his or her heart for this charming, wayward creature?

It is not often that the personality of the author of a successful book is as interesting and as attractive as the author's work. As a rule it is not wise for an appreciative reader to come into personal relations with a writer whose works have delighted him, as there is a risk of shattering an ideal. In the case of Miss Harraden, however, the favored few who have had the pleasure of meeting her have been impressed with the charm of her personality and attracted by her unaffected and cordial manner. Miss Harraden is very much what one would imagine the author of Ships that Pass in the Night should be, recalling vividly the picture of her own heroine Bernardine Holmes, after she had met and loved the "Disagreeable Man."

Heavenly Twins, The.

By Sarah Grand. 12mo. With frontispiece portrait of Sarah Grand.....

Retail. Net.
$1 00 ts

"This book, undoubtedly the literary sensation of the year, is more than a 'purpose' novel, it is a serious study, and judging by its enormous sale, a good many people are taking it seriously. It is a study of 'woman's sphere,' a study of heredity, a study of the marriage question and a study of the whole surface of our latter day civilisation. The whole volume is a plea for a wider knowledge for girls before marriage, and a crusade against the state of society which upholds a different set of morals for men and women."

SARAH GRAND.

From "The Heavenly Twins."

The Cassell Publishing Co.

*Highland Cousins.

By William Black. Illustrated, 12mo..... 1 75 p.ru

"Mr. Black knows so well just what to describe, and to what length, that the scenery of his novels—by comparison with that of many we are obliged to read—seems to have been freshened by soft spring rains. His painting of character, his conversations and situations, are never strongly dramatic and exciting, but they are thoroughly good. He never gives us a tame or a tiresome chapter, and this is something for which readers will be profoundly grateful."—N. Y. Tribune.

*Hilltop Summer, A.

By Alyn Yates Keith. Cloth. Illustrated with half-tone vignettes. 12mo. 1 25 ll

"The author of 'A Spinster's Leadets' has a charm of style which is peculiarly her own, and which has full scope in her new volume, 'A Hilltop Summer.' The characters of village life which she draws with great skill show much quaint humor and pathos, and the descriptive parts are vivid and beautiful. The book is carefully illustrated by many delicate half tones."

Holy Cross and Other Tales, The.

By Eugene Field. With cover, title page, and initial letter pieces designed by Louis J. Rhead. 18mo. Second edition. Gilt top, deckled edges 1 25 p.pu

"There are in all about ten stories, conceived in that delicately fanciful style and told with all the charm of manner which has characterized Mr. Field's previous writings. The author has always considered the prose tales his best work; and the fact that of the first volume of the sort over twelve thousand copies have been sold shows in a measure the public's appreciation."

House of the Wolf, The.

A romance by Stanley J. Weyman. With frontispiece and vignette by Charles Kerr. 12mo. 1 25 11

"A delightful volume . . . one of the brightest, briakest tales I have met with for a long time. Dealing with the Eve of St. Bartholomew, it portrays that night of horror from a point entirely new, and, we may add, relieves the gloom by many a flash and gleam of sunshine. Best of all is the conception of the Vidame. His character alone would make the book live."—The Critic, New York.

By Francis Mary Peard. 12mo 1 25 11

This story will remind Miss Peard's readers of her earlier successes. It deals with the French provincial life which she knows so well and depicts so faithfully. It is a well-told story; the characters are interesting, the plot is original, and throughout there is a wholesome suggestiveness.

No poet or novelist has done more for his favorite haunt than S. Baring Gould has done for his beloved Devonshire. But in "Kitty Alone" we have not only a picturesque and graphic exhibition of native character and landscape, but a drama of life unfolded with all the force and pathos and grim humor the author has heretofore shown. A story of remarkable power and vigor, it compels interest by its striking plot and exciting dramatic episode.

"The publishers have shown excellent discrimination in their choice of material for their projected library of choice fiction, and they have certainly given these initial volumes a form that bespeaks the warmest praise. They are books that the student of literature would not be ashamed to have upon his shelves, and at the same time they are not too fine for general use in the family library, for which they are eminently fitted."

If Mr. Meredith could have a surprise in store for his greatest admirers it would be in the production of this masterly novel, which is one of the frankest, most human, most stirring stories we have had for years, and yet one so finely restrained and inherently healthy that a feeling of exhilaration and strength is brought away from it.

"It is something between a novel and a book of travel, containing many brief, spirited descriptions of the scenery of the isthmus and its tropical vegetation. Never in the least florid, these interludes are written in a simple, direct, terse style, which makes them the most interesting part of the book. The narrative is dramatic enough to hold these pictures together effectively. This Crusoe-like tale is told in so straightforward a fashion that one is half convinced of its truth, and follows the Northerners through their hair-breadth escapes with active interest. It is a book which will make any boy breathless with excitement."—The Critic, New York.

"It is a strong story, to say the least. It might have been called 'Two Modern Magdalene's,' for it is a tale of two wrecked lives, one as pitiable as the other. The scene is, for the most part, San Francisco, of which the incidental descriptions are undeniably realistic. The same realism is carried into the chapters which deal with the shadier side of city life. * * * In its general character, in its conception and purpose, the story is as high as it is strong, and it is certainly interesting, which is, after all, the one thing that a novel must be to achieve success."—San Francisco Chronicle.

The scene of Mr. Clark's novel is a lonely Rocky Mountain ranch, above the clouds. It is a strong, well-written story, with novelty of plot and individuality in the characters, and the emotional power and the grave sincerity of the book will impress thoughtful readers.

Other Things Being Equal.

"It is a romance, pure and simple, and has the rare merit of artistic unity. It commands attention by its gentle might—the legitimate method of romance. The story goes on largely in the minds of the characters, is always temperate in style, and is developed by almost imperceptible touches. . . . It is a relief to find an unspoiled story of pure sentiment, without sensationalism, mawkish sentimentality, affected eccentricity, or the least sign of pandering to the too popular compromise with immorality."—The Boston Post.

There has not appeared in many a day a story of more power and originality than Miss Mary Wilkins's "Pembroke." It is a tale of country life, and of plain rugged people who are possessed of marked characteristics that are contrasted and grouped in a masterly way. While the story was appearing serially in Harper's Weekly , the New York Sun , said of it, among other things: "As a picture of New England life and character, as a story of such surpassing interest that he who begins is compelled to finish it, as a work of art without a fault or a deficiency, we cannot see how 'Pembroke' could possibly be improved."

*Philip and His Wife.

By Margaret Deland, author of "John Ward, Preacher," etc. 16mo.....	1 25	ll
Whoever reads novels merely for the story will find Mrs. Deland very satisfactory; for she tells her story so skillfully and with such literary art, that the reader who does not strongly care for her purpose may well be fascinated. But Mrs. Deland has a very well-defined purpose in the novel of "Philip and His Wife." The hero (not the writer) favors free divorce because he considers marriage without love to be "as spiritually illegal as love without marriage is civilly illegal." This sentence, though not defining the purpose of the novel, gives a slight clue to its general character. It is emphatically a story of and for the present time, treating through the progress of the plot and the conversations of the characters some of the gravest and most important social problems.

"Picciola: The Prisoner of Fenestrella, or Captivity Captive," is one of the most charming and popular of French classics. The artist has thoroughly sympathized with the delicacy and beauty of this tender and touching story, and the publishers believe that this edition will take a permanent place as the standard illustrated "Picciola." It is uniform with the illustrated editions of "Colette" and "An Attic Philosopher in Paris."

Translated from the Russian of Fedor Dostoevsky by Lena Milman, with decorative title-page and a critical introduction by George Moore. 16mo.	1 00	nt

A capable critic writes: "One of the most beautiful, touching stories I have ever read. The character of the old clerk is a masterpiece—a kind of Russian Charles Lamb. He reminds me, too, of Anatole France's 'Hylvestre Bonnard,' but it is a more poignant, moving figure. How wonderfully, too, the sad little strokes of humor are blended into the pathos in his characterization, and how fascinating all the naive self-revelations of his poverty become—all his many ups and downs and hopes and fears. His unsuccessful visit to the money-lender, his despair at the office, unexpectedly ending in a sudden burst of good fortune, the final despairing cry of his love for Varvara—these hold one breathless. One can hardly read them without tears. . . . But there is no need to say all that could be said about the book. It is enough to say that it is over powerful and beautiful.

"Out of Step" is no less dramatic than "The Two Salomes," and it strikes a deeper chord of emotion. A powerful climax is reached in the concluding chapter of the story. The curious psychologic study which is represented in such a heroine as Salome is worked out in the fullest values of light and shade.

A Story of the Times of Ahab, King of Israel.

By A. W. Ackerman. 12mo.....

1 25 lp

This book will be found intensely interesting because of the light it throws on an eventful period in the history of the people of Israel. Dealing with the times of the weak-minded King Ahab and his idolatrous wife Jezebel, it sets before the reader, in the attractive form of a tale, something of the domestic as well as the military life of those troublous times. Perhaps its most valuable feature is the carefully drawn and life-like portrait of the courageous prophet Micaiah. The interest is greatly enhanced by the exquisitely pure love-story that is interwoven with the stirring historical events.

May the author soon let us have something else as good as this."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

This charming little volume, with frontispiece in color, and more than thirty drawings and decorations by the author, consists principally of sketches of life on the Nova Scotia coast, quaint studies of the Canadian fisher-folk of P'tit Matin. In addition there are two stories of a different sort, "Old Grimes' Masterpiece" and a "Disturber of Faith," the first being a pathetic little story of artist life, and the second an interesting account of an experience with a European adventurer.

*Romance of a Transport, The.

By W. Clark Russell. 12mo.
 Clark Russell stands without a peer as a master in telling marine stories. He is thoroughly at home at sea. There is a genuine sea flavor to all he writes; a salty taste, a smell of ropes and rigging, and the bracing freshness of the ocean air, and withal there is a refreshing absence of the vulgarity and coarseness which so many nautical writers think it necessary to affect. His books are wholesome reading for both old and young.

One of the greatest charms of Miss Sheppard's books is their spontaneity. . . . Her diction is of poetic fervor, even extravagance, that would seem grandiloquent if the simplicity of treatment of the simple portions of the theme were not entirely free from affectation of style. "Of Mr. Stockton's stories what is there to say, but that they are an unmixed blessing and delight? Story of Lawrence Garth, The.

By Ellen Olney Kirk. 16mo.

Retail. Net.
$1 25 11

Mrs. Kirk's host of admiring readers will gladly welcome this new story. The scene of it is laid in New York City, but it is not a society novel, although it represents everyday social life. As in many contemporary novels, marriage is rather the point of departure than of arrival. It is decidedly a modern novel, including in its characters many persons who represent the tendencies of to-day.

Story of Margredel, The.

Being a fireside history of a Fifehire family. By David Storrar Meldrum. 16mo.

1 00 ts

The opinions of the press have differed materially in regard to "The Story of Margredel." The British press has been unanimous in its praise of the story for its strength and power, and many of the leading journals in the United States have taken the same ground. The story does not belong to that class of literature that can be skimmed over and dismissed without a thought. It appeals rather to the more thoughtful group of readers who are able to appreciate artistic excellence in the development of a plot.

Story of a Modern Woman, The.

By Ella Hepworth Dixon. 12mo.

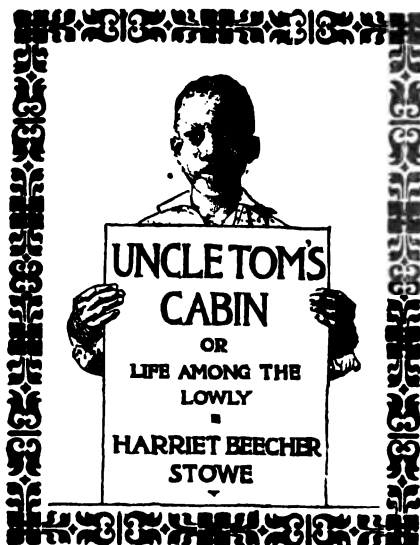

1 00 ts

In this story, based on the struggles of a young London lady of good family, who has been orphaned, to maintain herself and younger brother, the author touches the much vexed questions of the feminine "sphere," woman's occupation, the theme of marriage, etc. All that is strongest and best in the character of the girl of to-day is brought out, and the finale is a vindication of the true "Modern Woman."

*Superfluous Woman, A.

12mo.

This strong novel has for its theme the story of a girl in the class of the "superfluous women," women who are brought up in luxury, with no aim in life, doing no good to themselves, or to any one else. "If the fathers of this generation are not fully aware upon whom their sins will be visited, it is not the fault of Ibsen, Sarah Grand, or the author of 'A Superfluous Woman.' Let us hope that their sermons will be heeded."

*Sweet Clover.

A Romance of the White City. By Clara Louise Burnham. 16mo. . . . 1 25

ll

A large circle of readers has unanimously voted that Mrs. Burnham is one of the most interesting of American story writers. Her stories are wholesome, there is a good deal of excellent love-making in them by nice people, and they are altogether readable. "Sweet Clover" will gratify her present constituency, and may well enlarge it. For it is a very well told story, in which the great Columbian Fair is dexterously connected with the love affairs of four persons.

Memories. A Story of German Love. Translated from the German of Max Müller, by George P. Upton.

"It is a prose poem. . . . It is seldom that a powerful intellect produces any work, however small, that does not bear some marks of its special bent; and the traces of research and philosophy in this little story are apparent, while its beauty and pathos show us a fresh phase of a many-sided mind, to which we already owe large debts of gratitude."—The Academy.

Graziella. A Story of Italian Love. Translated from the French of A. De Lamartine, by James B. Runnion.

"'Graziella' is a poem in prose. The subject and the treatment are both eminently poetic. . . . It glows with love of the beautiful in all Nature. . . . It is pure literature—a perfect story couched in perfect words. The sentences have rhythm and flow, the sweetness and tender fancy of the original. It is uniform with Max Müller's 'Memories,' and it should stand side by side with that on the shelves of every lover of pure, strong thoughts put in pure, strong words. 'Graziella' is a book to be loved."—The Chicago Tribune.

"UNAPPROACHABLE HAUGHTINESS OF DEMEANOR."

From Kate Douglas Wiggin's "A Cathedral Courtship." Houghton, Mifflin & Co.

Marie. A Story of Russian Love. From the Russian of Alexander Pushkin, by Marie H. De Zielinska.

"An unadorned record, told in a most charming way, of the adventures of a young Russian officer, who sees service against some rebels, and whose betrothal to the heroine forms the romantic part of the story. There is plenty of incident, and the narration is so direct and simple that the reader becomes at once conscious of a master's hand."—The Nation, New York.

Madeleine. A Story of French Love (crowned by the French Academy).

Translated from the French of Jules Sandeau, by Francis Charlot.

"Jules Sandeau's 'Madeleine' is a love-story that approximates very closely to perfection. It is a theme of exceeding purity and beauty, treated by an artist whose style is as finished and delicate as it is firm, and whose French is a model of elegant simplicity. It is not surprising that 'Madeleine' has become a classic, ranking with 'The Attic Philosopher' and only a little below 'Paul and Virginia.' Sandeau tells of the salvation of a wrecked life by the agency of a pure and constant love."—The Times, Philadelphia.

Marianela. A Story of Spanish Love. Translated from the Spanish of B. Perez Galdos, by Helen W. Lester.

Cousin Phillis. A Story of English Love. By Mrs. Gaskell.

"It is as pure and noble a love story as ever was written. It is a good one to put into the hands of young girls, for it refines and elevates their youthful ideals."—Public Opinion, Washington.

*Tales from the Ægean.

By Demetrios Bikelas. Translated by Leonard E. Opdycke. With an introduction by Henry A. Huntington. 16mo.

1 00 ne

Mr. Bikelas, the author of the eight beautiful stories which make up this volume, is, perhaps, the most popular living author in his own land, and his name is a household word among all who take an interest in the modern Greeks. Of these tales some are sad, some imbued with a gentle humor, and all are pure and refined in sentiment. Their special value lies in the realistic pictures they paint of Greek life in our own times.

Tales of Soldiers and Civilians.

By Ambrose Bierce. New Edition. 18mo, gilt top.

1 00 ys

Although never, in reality, published before, Mr. Bierce's 'Tales of Soldiers and Civilians' have had a certain circulation, and have won for their author praise of a high character. In their effective weirdness they are worthy to be classed with the writings of Hoffmann, Poe and Jean Richepin. They are strong and daring, and show the taste of an artist in the way they are worked out. Their present publication, it is believed, will gain for them general recognition.

Henry James says: "The three Englishmen—the little, beautiful, lovable genius, the mighty man with whiskers, and the would-be-Andalusian Scot—inspire us at the very outset with a clinging comradeship. As for Trilby herself, it strikes me that few heroines of fiction have from the first announced themselves so unmistakably as fatal to the reader's peace. Her beauty is almost terrible; almost calculated to make us bashful, the bold familiarity with life with which she already stands there. It is but too plain that we are to suffer the last extremity from Trilby. We love her so much that we are vaguely uneasy for her; considerably inlollined even to pray for her. . . . It all belongs to the sociable, audible air, the irresponsible personal pitch of a style so talked and smoked, so drawn, so danced, so played, so whistled and sung, that it never occurs to us even to ask ourselves whether it is written."

By John Kendrick Bangs. Illustrated. 16mo.... 1 25

In the stories collected in this volume Mr. Bangs treats supernatural apparitions and psychological phenomena from an unusual standpoint. Sparkling dialogue, original situations, and pervasive humor combine to produce a volume of ghost stories which is decidedly unique.

This is a tale of the primeval Canadian forests, in which the leading characters (persons of more than ordinary brightness and culture) are thrown in contact with the sturdy but uncouth woodsmen. The story moves briskly and is full of witty and sprightly conversations and strong studies of character interspersed here and there with stirring descriptions of adventures with rod and gun. A portrait of the author forms an appropriate frontispiece to the volume.

Where Honour Leads.

"A Question of Honour," published last year, was more than a well-written story. It contained elements of dramatic power and insight that promised possibilities of a higher achievement in fiction, and in this new venture that promise has been fulfilled. Her titles are attractive, and the present one introduces us to a story that is interesting from beginning to end. Lynde Palmer never bores her readers; she has always something fresh to tell them, and always in a winning style.

"Hubert Crackanthorpe has written seven of the most remarkable short stories we have read for a long, long while. The title gives the keynote of the theme upon which they are written. Wreckage—wrecked lives, hopes and ambitions, and they are indeed studies, not completed pictures. The author has a rare gift of telling his tale in a tender, sympathetic manner that has a great charm. Some others might tell the same story, but they would be distasteful. To us they are among the best of numerous volumes of short stories offered to the public for some time."— Boston Times .

This delightful little novelette chronicles the unhappy experiences of "Knox D. Lanfair, of the Excelsior Sewing and Tack Company," who, though a first-rate salesman, was a poor hand at writing love-letters. In an evil hour he induced his friend, Hampton Goriedge, to conduct his correspondence with his fiancée for him, the complications that result from this arrangement furnishing the basis for the story. The book is gotten up in the daintiest manner, and is admirably adapted as a tasteful but inexpensive gift for almost any occasion.

Dr. Winsor here gives an important chapter of the geographical history of the age of American explorations. He narrates the story of the attempts of the French to go into the interior of North America, and shows how by degrees they approximated to an accurate understanding of the problem to be solved. It is the first book devoted to this topic, and Dr. Winsor's profound historical researches, and investigations of the maps, depicting the St. Lawrence and vicinity three centuries ago, give very great value and interest to this book.

"With the rest of the world we come with our homage to Macaulay. On whatever side we look at this book, whether the style or matter of it, it is alike astonishing. The style is faultlessly luminous; every word is in its right place; every sentence is exquisitely balanced, the current never flags. Homer, according to the Roman poet, may be sometimes languid, Macaulay is always bright, sparkling, attractive."—Westminster Review, London.

Readers of "France in the Nineteenth Century," and "Russia and Turkey in the Nineteenth Century" will welcome this companion volume, which must take high place among the valuable contributions to popular historical literature. Mrs. Latimer is a woman of fine instincts, liberal culture, and unusual literary skill and experience. Visiting in England frequently for a long period of years, she had rare opportunities to witness and study many of the events of which she writes. Like the other two volumes it will be finely and profusely illustrated.

*Footprints of the Jesuits, The.

By R. W. Thompson, ex-Secretary of the Navy. 12mo.....	1 75	p.pt
--	------	------

Mr. Thompson, who was formerly Secretary of the U. S. Navy, writes as an ardent patriot, desiring to defend his country from any attack on its hard-won liberties. He believes that the doctrines of the Jesuits are opposed to our free institutions; that they are bound by oath to work for the subjection of all matters religious to the Pope of Rome, whom they would restore to political supremacy. His authorities are for the most part the writings and utterances of the Jesuits themselves. But he does not antagonize the Roman Catholic Church; on the contrary, the book is equally addressed to Catholic patriots, who, he believes, are interested to keep Church and State divorced. He gives an interesting history of the rise and spread of Jesuit principles, and proves beyond a doubt that the triumph of this scheming sect would mean a terrible retrogression in civilization and religion.

France in the Nineteenth Century,

1830-1890. By Elizabeth Wormeley Latimer.

Beautifully illustrated with 22 full-page half-tone portraits. 8vo. 2 50 p.nu

"The story of 'France in the Nineteenth Century' as told by Mrs. Latimer is as absorbing as a work of fiction. Indeed, for rapid changes of front, for picturesque situations, remarkable vacillation of public opinion, no period of European history is more remarkable than this. . . . For telling situations and for startling effects, she certainly does not lack. . . . She is always picturesque. In her analysis of character she displays a thorough mastery of her subject. . . . Mrs. Latimer has written an extremely interesting book, which will be read with eagerness."—The Daily Advertiser, Boston.

"He has added a great historical work to the language, taking its place with other great histories, and yet not like any of them in the special combination of merits which it exhibits; an art of grouping and narration different from that of Hume, different from that of Gibbon, and yet producing the effect of sustained charm and pleasure; a peculiarly keen interest in events of the political order, and a wide knowledge of the business of politics; and, finally, harmonizing all, a spirit of sober, philosophical generalization, always tending to view facts collectively in their speculative bearing as well as to record them individually."—Athenæum, London.

*Home Life of the Ancient Greeks, The.

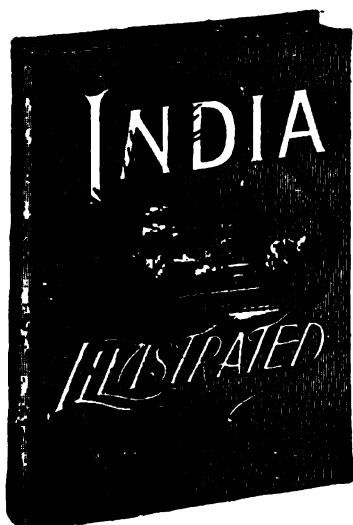

Translated from the German of Prof. H. Blümner, by Alice Zimmern. With numerous illustrations. 12mo, gilt top.....	Retail. $2 00	Net p.ds
--	-------------------	-------------

Dr. Blümner's work embraces the entire circle of Grecian home life from birth to death and burial. The author has spared no pains in depicting the home life of the ancient Greek, and the result is a volume of rare interest and value. It is full of illustrations, taken largely from the vase paintings, which are not only extremely interesting, but also useful as material for the author's comment.

By this attractive volume Mr. Janvier has earned the gratitude of all interested in the history of the metropolis. It is full of out-of-the-way and interesting information concerning the streets and byways, old buildings and earlier inhabitants of the city. No resident of New York City can fail to discover a new interest in the street through which his daily walk lies, or of which he catches a glimpse from the elevated railway, after reading Mr. Janvier's bright pages. Changes wrought by time in the appearance of things and in the manners and customs of people, are delightfully portrayed in this volume by both author and artist.

*Reign of Queen Anne, The. By Mrs. Oliphant, author of "The Makers of Florence," etc. With 22 full-page illustrations, royal octavo, elaborately tooled in gold.....	6 00	d.rs

The brilliantly written papers by Mrs. Oliphant on the people of Queen Anne's time, which have been appearing in the Century Magazine from time to time, have been collected into a handsome volume under the above title. These papers describe the court and famous people of that day, including Dean Swift, Defoe, Addison, the Duchess of Marlborough and other celebrities. Mrs. Oliphant's training as a novelist enables her to give a new life to the characters of this age without sacrificing the accuracy of the historian. The book is magnificently printed and bound, the portraits being all full-page pictures printed in two colors and inset in the volume.

"FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE."

From "Russia and Turkey in the Nineteenth Century." A. C. McClurg & Co.

Russia and Turkey in the Nineteenth Century.

By Elizabeth Wormeley Latimer. Fully and handsomely illustrated, with 23 half-tone portraits, 8vo..... 2 50 p.nu

The work is an excellent one, its references and quotations being judiciously selected from reliable sources, and it is an interesting and readable story in its every part. Poland, Servia, Roumania and other collateral governments are presented in their proper sequence, forming in the story a well-balanced and harmonious whole. The volume is praiseworthy in that it presents to us in concise and interesting form much information of value to us the political opposite of the Muscovite form of government. The work is admirably printed, and is embellished with many full-page portraits which add much to the value of the text.—The Boston Times.

By John Fiske. With Topics and Questions, Suggestive Questions and Directions, and Topics for Collateral Reading, by Frank A. Hill, Secretary of the State Board of Education, Massachusetts. Copiously illustrated. 12mo.....	net 1 00	yd

It is a cause for congratulation to all pupils that Mr. Fiske has written a History of the United States for use in schools. He has full knowledge of the facts of American history, and a clear grasp of their relations; he understands very distinctly the political and social antecedents of the early settlers, and the personal and other influences which determined the evolution of American political ideas and institutions. This large knowledge and this wise appreciation are supplemented by an unrivaled clearness of style, which lends a peculiar value and a singular charm to whatever he writes. A School History of the United States by Mr. Fiske will teach the great facts and lessons of our country's annals with an effectiveness and a fascination which will delight both scholars and teachers. The book is very fully illustrated, but not for mere embellishment; all the maps and pictures have a positive historic value. The co-operation of Mr. Hill, in the special line in which his large knowledge and experience in teaching enable him to contribute most effectively to the value of the work, adds not a little to the completeness of the equipment of the book for the best results in schools.

For nine years the author has devoted himself to the task of supplying the want of a complete history of our navy. His researches in France, with the assistance of Admiral Aube, Minister of the Colonies and the Marine, and in England with the aid of the late Sir Provo Wallis and others, together with the use of private papers and unpublished documents in this country, the aid of descendants of naval heroes and the suggestions of naval officers who have taken part in some of the events described, render the results of his diligent labor complete and authoritative. The appearance of this standard history is a peculiarly happy accompaniment of the development of our new navy.

"Miss Gertrude Hall, whose volume of stories, with the title 'Far from To-day,' won an immediate popularity and well-deserved praise from litterateurs, has given us another book. They are very bright, witty, often charmingly fanciful, and display a keen sense of humor, and they flow on one after the other with a decidedly allegretto movement. The volume is another proof of the diversity of talent possessed by the accomplished author, and it will become a center-table favorite, as well as a pleasant friend in social reading circles."—Boston Home Journal.

"There is a vein of genuine poetry in Mr. Knight, and in his wanderings "By Moorland and Sea" it finds graceful expression. These fifteen descriptive essays are filled with close but never paraded observation of Nature in sunshine and storm, and each little delicate picture is firmly drawn and has in it just the requisite amount of local color. The breath of the country is in these sketches, and that fact in part explains their spell, and the rest of the secret stands revealed in the brilliant descriptive gift of the writer." — The Speaker.

"Humor, drollery, and pathos are oddly and yet naturally combined in rhyme, and not only strike the popular fancy, but touch the popular heart. The author, however, is more than a mere humorist in song, he has a kindly spirit and sympathy with all grades of humanity, and at times rises into the higher sphere of poetry, and displays dramatic and lyric capacities of a high order."—Lutheran Observer, Philadelphia.

This is the first complete collection of Mr. Gilder's works that has been made. From time to time separate books of poems from his pen have been published under the titles of "The Great Remembrance and Other Poems," "Two Worlds and Other Poems," "The New Day," "The Celestial Passion," and "Lyrics." These five books have now been gathered together and are issued in one volume of 250 pages under the above appropriate title. To these are added several poems heretofore unpublished, making the volume the only complete collection of poems by the editor of The Century.

All the volumes of this series are from specially prepared and corrected texts, based upon a careful collation of all the more authentic editions.

"The special merit of these editions, aside from the graceful form of the books, lies in the editor's reserve. Whenever the author has provided a preface or notes, this apparatus is given and thus some interesting matter is revived, but the editor himself refrains from loading the books with his own writing."—The Atlantic Monthly.

The Lady of the Lake. By Sir Walter Scott.

"The Lady of the Lake" appeared in 1800.

It took the world by storm. The public was unanimous in its favor, the reviews vied with each other in celebrating this greatest poem of the age."—Mrs. Oliphant, in The Literary History of England.

Childe Harold's Pilgrimage. A Romaunt. By Lord Byron.

"'Childe Harold' derives its wonderful power over our sympathies from the admirable variety, splendor, and beauty of its descriptions of scenery, spots of eternal and historical interest, and the great triumphs of human art and genius."—Thomas B. Shaw, in Outlines of English Literature.

Lalla Rookh. An Oriental Romance. By Thomas Moore.

"Moore has shown in the poetry selected for the 'Irish Melodies' and more so in his celebrated 'Lalla Rookh' how beautifully the feelings of a delicate passion can be conveyed in language of the most brilliant and powerful description."—Dibdin's Library Companion.

Idyls of the King. By Alfred, Lord Tennyson.

"It is the epic of chivalry—the Christian ideal of chivalry which we have deduced from a barbaric source—our conception of what knighthood should be, rather than what it really was; but so skillfully wrought of high imaginings, fairy spells, fantastic legends, and mediæval splendors; that the whole work, suffused with the Tennysonian glamor of golden mist, seems like a chronicle illuminated by saintly hands."—Edmund Clarence Stedman.

Paradise Lost. By John Milton.

"What phantasmagory more truly all-significant than this has the imagination of poet ever conceived? What expanse of space, comparable to this for vastness, has any other poet presumed to occupy with a coherent story? The physical universe of Dante's great poem would go into a nutshell as compared with that to which the imagination must stretch itself out in 'Paradise Lost.' Vastness of scene and power of story together, little wonder that the poem should have so impressed the world."—David Masson.

The Iliad of Homer. Translated by Alexander Pope. 2 vols.

"Pope's translation of the Iliad occupies a position in literature which no other has ever approached. It is the one poem of the kind that has obtained a reputation beyond the limits of the country in the language of which it is written, and the only one that has fascinated the imagination of the unlearned. Many an English reader, to whom Greek was literally a dead language, has followed through it the action of the Iliad with a livelier interest than that of the 'Faerie Queen' or of 'Paradise Lost.'"—W. I. Comthope.

The deepest and tenderest maternal emotions have found utterance in these elegiac sonnet sequences. Their profound religious feeling recalls the poetry of Christina G. "A book of poetry breaking rather new ground is announced in 'A London Rose and Other Rhymes,' by Mr. Ernest Rhys. It takes its main impulse, however, not from London but from Wales. It attempts the experiment of introducing certain of the metrical effects, peculiar to Welsh poetry, into its rhymes; one ballad in particular, relating to a remote bardic episode, and entitled 'The House of Hendra,' even makes use in a modified form of the much debated 'Cynganedd.'"— Academy .

"It is a work of genuine poetic power, happy in conception, and wrought out with skill and beauty."—Theodore T. Munger.

Pictures from Nature and Life.

Poems by Kate Raworth Holmes. Illustrated by Helen E. Stevens. Quarto.

2 50 p.uc

One of the finest books of poetry that have appeared during the holiday season is "Pictures from Nature and Life." The verses are well written, and are filled with bright thoughts and fancies, while no less admiration will be bestowed on the artistic work. Each poem is done in a different style of fancy lettering, with here and there designs of flowers and leaves. These are interspersed with reproductions of photographs of buildings, landscapes, persons—the nature and life referred to in the lines. "One Fair Day" recounts the wanderings and romantic musings of a happy pair of lovers. "My Lady" is a pretty, sentimental poem, while "The Walf" is a bright sketch. "The Bride" is marked by true and tender sentiment.—The School Journal, New York.

The poems that make up this collection embody thoughts and reflections upon mature life and old age. The selections have been made with excellent taste, and reflect the refined appreciation of the compiler. The burden of all the poems is contentment and a serene confidence as to the future; the sun of life sets in an unclouded sky.

Poets and the Poetry of the Century, The.

Renaissance Bindings, The (of Poems).

Popular books, bound in full crushed Turkey morocco of dainty colors, and decorated in a style which fully justifies the characteristic term "Renaissance," being a revival of the old English bindings in vogue some seventy or eighty years ago, which were adapted from various artistic designs used in the Middle Ages. The books are hand-finished in a chaste and beautiful manner, solid gold edges, rolled on the inside and outer edges of the covers.

"I tell you James Whitcomb Riley is nothing short of a born poet and a veritable genius. I think he is a later Hosea Biglow, quite as original as the latter and more versatile in certain respects. I own a good deal of enthusiasm for this later product of Indiana soil, this delineator of lowly humanity, who sings with so much fervor, pathos, humor and grace, and who has done things which will long be remembered, perhaps, which will outlast the more laborious work of some of the older and more pretentious poets."—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

"In and out of his books, Mr. Stedman brings with him the same stimulating atmosphere—produced on one side by the precision and clarity of the older tradition to which I have referred, on the other by his immediate response to the appeal of the moment. * * * There is no trace of time or of place in his dealings with the literary topics which have occupied so much of his time. He is cosmopolitan to the core. * * * Mr. Stedman's vivacity is essentially that of a citizen of the world, without being especially caustic; he is yet incisive, compact beyond the usual measure of American wit, and his whole air is of a culture thoroughly independent of geographical conditions. He has done a great deal to modernize American literature, to purge it of Americanisms, and to express in it the tacit knowledge of laws formulated by neither one school nor the other, which is one of the sure tests of scholarship."—ROYAL COTTERISOZ, in The Century Magazine .

LORD TENNYSON.

of poetry by Mr. Aldrich is a very welcome event to all lovers of good literature, especially to all who appreciate the exquisite art which invariably stamps his poems. The title poem of this new book will be recalled as a ringing protest, printed in the Atlantic Monthly, against unregulated immigration into the United States. The other poems include many noteworthy lyrics written by Mr. Aldrich within the past six years. The book will be very carefully printed, as befits the poetry it contains.

Mr. Stedman has made an inclusive but choice selection from the entire field of British poetry since the beginning, in 1837, of the present reign—the field surveyed and criticised in his "Victorian Poets." That book, which is regarded as a standard here and abroad, has gone through many editions, and the demand for it grows with the increased attention paid to English literature. The new work is composed of "selections in illustration of the editor's review of poetry in the reign of Victoria," and will be a companion to that volume. The arrangement of its contents is intended to show the various groups and tendencies of the period—a time which Mr. Stedman deems richer in imaginative literature than any since the Elizabethan.

*When Hearts Are Trumps.

Verses. By Tom Hall. With title-page and decorations by Will. H. Bradley. 18mo, gilt top, deckled edges.....

1 25 p.pu

"The name of 'Tom Hall' has become a delightfully familiar one to all readers of Life and the other weekly papers. He has shown a facility and fancy in the production of 'society verse' which are very charming. The present volume is a collection of his best work, made additionally attractive by the decorative designs of Mr. Bradley."

This is an entirely new edition from new plates, and in all respects is like the Handy-Volume Edition of Longfellow's Poems published last year, which is a favorite with lovers of choice books. The type and external size of the volumes are a little larger than those usually adopted for Handy-Volume Editions, thus giving them a dignity befitting the library without in any way detracting from their delightfully convenient form. The paper has been specially made with a view to its opacity and its printing qualities, while the binding has a style and quality that please book-fanciers. Each volume has a portrait, the four representing the poet at different periods of his life, and each frontispiece is followed by an engraved title with an etching. The four volumes are inclosed in a neat box.

This volume presents Whittier's Complete Poems in the same form as the Cambridge Edition of Longfellow's Poems, which is regarded as a model of its kind. The text is preceded by a biographical sketch, and is provided with short notes and an index of first lines. It is beautifully printed from new plates, in a type specially selected with a view to its clearness as well as its elegance, and on paper remarkable for its opacity and its high quality. The binding, while simple and chaste, is decorative in design, and by its combined firmness and flexibility makes the book a most agreeable one to handle. The size is only slightly larger than a regular crown octavo, thus fitting it eminently for library use.

"Mr. Upton in a series of comparatively brief chapters, has given us a kind of interior history of the domestic and heart relations of such composers as Bach, Handel, Beethoven, Mozart, Schumann, Chopin and Wagner, filling in the larger sketches of these masters by lightly drawn, but very interesting pictures of their relations with various gifted and unselfish women, who helped on their individual development, and laid the world under obligation by materially assisting in the production of some of their great compositions."

This work, which from the date of its original publication, has been regarded as classical authority, was revised a few years since by Rev. Edward Everett Hale. In former editions, Mr. Bullfinch's endeavor was to connect mythology with literature. The interest and study in art having so largely increased of late years, the original idea has been extended by connecting the subject with the principal works of sculpture and painting—a History of Greek Sculpture, an exhaustive index, and many new illustrations making over one hundred pages, have been added to this new edition.

References for Literary Workers.

With Introductions to Topics and Questions for Debate. By Henry Matson. Crown 8vo... 2 50 p.nu

"One has but to glance at this compact and convenient condensation, under different heads, of the subjects upon which the world's best minds have been thinking for ages, with a catalogue of the best works on each subject, to recognize its value, and to wonder why some one has not thought of it earlier. . . . Hardly can a subject be thought of about which some information cannot here be found. It will be invaluable for school, college, debating club, family, and in short, for every intelligent man who thinks and wants to know."—Public Opinion. Washington.

WEBSTER'S INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY.

A GRAND INVESTMENT FOR THE FAMILY, SCHOOL OR LIBRARY.
A CHOICE GIFT.

THE International is a complete and thorough revision of the well-known Unabridged. Though it has been before the public but a short time, it has been warmly commended by members of the United States Supreme Court and by many of the State Supreme Courts; by every State Superintendent of Schools in office since its publication, by eminent Authors, College Presidents, and Educators almost without number. It is recognized as standard authority by the U. S. Government Printing Office, and is the standard to which nearly all the school books adhere.

Hon. D. J. Brewer of the U. S. Supreme Court writes:

"The 'International Dictionary' is the perfection of dictionaries. I commend it to all as the one great standard authority."

A College President writes:

"For ease with which the eye finds the word sought, for accuracy of definition, for effective methods in indicating pronunciation, for terse yet comprehensive statements of facts, and for practical use as a working dictionary, 'Webster's International' excels any other single volume."

THE LIBRARY.

Give me the room whose every nook
Is dedicated to a book;
Two windows will suffice for air
And grant the light admission there;
One looking to the south, and one
To speed the red departing sun;
The eastern wall from frieze to plinth
Shall be the Poet's labyrinth,
Where one may find the lords of rhyme
From Homer's down to Dobson's time:
And at the northern side a space
Shall show an open chimney-place,
Set round with ancient tiles that tell
Some legend old, and weave a spell
About the firedog-guarded seat,
Where, musing, one may taste the heat:
Above, the mantel should not lack
For curios and bric-à-brac—
Not much, but just enough to light
The room up when the fire is bright.
The volumes on the wall should be
All prose and all philosophy,
From Plato down to those who are
The dim reflections of that star;
And these tomes all should serve to show
How much we write—how little know;
For since the problem once was set
No one has ever solved it yet.
Upon the shelves along the west
The scientific works shall rest;
Beside them, History; above,—
Religion—hope, and faith, and love:
Lastly, the southern wall should hold
The story-tellers, new and old;
Haroun al Raschid, who was truth
And happiness to all my youth,
Shall have the honored place of all
That dwell upon the sunny wall;
And with him there shall stand a throng
Of those who help mankind along
More by their fascinating lies
Than all the learning of the wise.

Such be the library; and take
This motto of a Latin make,
To grace the door through which I pass:
Hic habitat Felicitas!

In this little work are brought together some of the choicest utterances of the best writers of all ages on the subject of the life hereafter. These extracts are in both prose and verse, and breathe a spirit of hope and elevated faith. Among the quotations will be found many exquisite pieces from the greatest writers of all ages and countries, a number being from living authors. The illustrations are mostly allegorical, and are characterized by ingenuity of design and deep feeling of expression.

*Christian State, The.
By George D. Herron, D. D., author of "The New Redemption," etc. 16mo, cloth.	75	es
The first chapters of this work have been delivered by Prof. Herron as an oration and in this form greatly moved and interested large audiences. The title of the book, especially the sub-title, stimulates the keenest anticipation. Mr. Herron's burning eloquence and tremendous zeal make his books eagerly welcomed and read, and this promises to be an advance upon all that have previously appeared from his pen.

Does God Send Trouble?

By Charles Cuthbert Hall, D. D., author of "Into His Marvelous Light." Crown 8vo.....	1 00	ts
Dr. Hall describes this book as "an earnest effort to discern between Christian tradition and Christian faith." It is dedicated "to all who sorrow over the sorrows of humanity," and its five chapters treat The Problem of Consolation; The Relation of God to Natural Law, to Chastisement, and to Discipline; The Historic Atonement and the Punishment of Sin; The Will of God and the Tendency of Nature; and The Duty, the Comfort, and the Power of Prayer. The subject, the inspiring tone and thought, and the attractive style, cannot fail to win and uplift many readers.

Christianity not as a Mystic Religion but as a New Theory of Life. Translated from the Russian of Count Leo Tolstoi, by Constance Garnett. 12mo, cloth..... $1 50 p.se Tolstoi's fame rests mainly on his reputation as a novelist. In the present volume the opportunity is afforded to become acquainted with the author as Philosopher and Social Reformer. Even those who disagree with his views must admit the boldness and originality of his conceptions of society. For the student of Tolstoi this book will have a special importance as marking another step in the philosophy of that stern moralist.

She has suffered the story, for the most part, to tell itself in the letters and journals of the dead. But these are arranged with the deft grace of a woman's fingers, and the image before one as the book is closed, witnesses to her success. The picture shines and lives. This is one of the best and most inspiring of missionary biographies—fit to rank with John G. Paton's marvelous story.

What is Worth While?

By Anna Robertson Brown, Ph. D. (Booklet). 35 ru
 This is a paper read before the Philadelphia branch of the Association of Collegiate Alumni. It urges the advisability of giving up pretense, wrong, discontent and self-seeking, and of taking loyal hold of time, work, present happiness, love, duty, friendship, sorrow and faith, and so living as to be an inspiration, strength and a blessing to others.

When the King Comes to His Own.

By E. S. Elliott. (Booklet). 35 ru

"... The disjointed and often fragmentary bones by which these animals are usually represented by museums convey no ideas whatever to the majority of those who see them. It is quite otherwise with such representations as the figures of this work; and if in some cases the idea conveyed may not be strictly correct, it offers a fair approximation, and at all events gives a vivid conception of some remarkable creature which in its main outlines cannot be far from the actual reality."—From the Preface, by Sir W. In Bird Land.

By Leander S. Keyser. 16mo.....	1 25	lp
To the Lover of Nature, such a book as this is far superior to all the learned works on natural history, though they are valuable in their own place. Mr. Keyser spends much of his time among the birds because he loves them. The feathered folk of this land are his friends and acquaintances, he has been present at their courtships, their quarrels, their marriages, and their schools; he sympathizes with them in their joys and sorrows, watches the training and notes the progress of the youngsters, and even interprets their language. In all the varied information it affords, it is exact and reliable.

*Riverby.

By John Burroughs, author of "Wake-Robin," "Signs and Seasons." 16mo..... 1 25 ll

John Burroughs has made so deep and distinct an impression as a man of rare power and genius for observation and a writer of admirable literary talent, that a new book by him is sure of a wide and hearty welcome. He is recognized, in England as well as America, as a thoughtful and charming essayist on out-door topics; as one who has remarkable skill in reading some of the secrets of nature, of divining the significance of trees, flowers, and birds; and also a like skill in translating these into admirable form for all good readers. His new book has much variety and all the Burroughs charm.

"I was much pleased, as you know, with the work when I read it in manuscript, but its worth has impressed me more in its present garb. To my mind, it is by far the most accurate and complete of books on modern acoustics, and on the acoustic bases of harmony. I feel sure that a work so full of information, given in such pleasing style, must have a success commensurate with its merits and the conscientious work expended on it."

Story of Our Planet, The.

By T. G. Bonney. With six colored plates and maps and about 100 illustrations. 8vo, gilt top. 5 00 u.es
The aim of the author, the Professor of Geology in University College, London, has been to render the geological history of the earth intelligible to non-scientific readers of ordinary education, technical terms being, if possible, avoided, and, if not, explained. Some theoretical questions, such as the age and duration of the globe, the permanence of oceans and continents, the cause of the glacial epoch, etc., are introduced and briefly discussed.

This is the first volume in the ANTHROPOLOGICAL SERIES, edited by Prof. Frederick Starr, of the University of Chicago. The series is undertaken in the hope that anthropology—the science of man—may become better known to intelligent readers. While the books are intended to be of general interest, they will in every case be written by authorities who will not sacrifice scientific accuracy to popularity. In the present volume is traced the interesting period when with fire-making began the first division of labor—a division of labor based upon sex—the man going to the field or forest for game, while the woman at the fireside became the burden-bearer, basket-maker, weaver, potter, agriculturist, and domesticator of animals.

$1 50	p.se

Not since the days of Marco Polo has a European traveler succeeded in crossing the Chinese Empire from the Western boundary to the capital. This Messrs. Allen and Sachtleben accomplished on bicycles, and their account of the trip, bristling as it did with curious and startling episodes, forms an intensely interesting volume. The ascent of Mt. Ararat and the passage of the Desert of Gobi are of especial interest, while the numerous illustrations that accompany the text give many curious glimpses of Asiatic life.

The above list of Mr. Ballou's popular books of travel would lead one to suppose he had visited all parts of the globe and told the story of every interesting section of it. But he has succeeded in finding another subject for his fertile pen in Ceylon, "the Pearl of India." From personal observation and such sources of information as are accessible, he gives a brief but comprehensive historical sketch of this remarkable island, of which most persons know very little indeed; he describes its fauna and flora, the inhabitants, their modes of life, customs, industries, amusements,—in short, Mr. Ballou tells in his well-known style just what a host of readers will be glad to learn about Ceylon.

Mrs. Trollope, the mother of Anthony Trollope, arrived in America in 1827, where she remained for more than three years. Upon her return she gave to the public her impressions of our country in the two volumes which are here reprinted from an early edition, now rare. This book, which made a great sensation at the time of its appearance, has a peculiar interest as a photograph of our manners and customs at a period which has passed beyond the recollection of most persons now living.

This book, as its title indicates, is devoted to portions of Japan and features of its life unfamiliar to American readers. Mr. Hearn has enjoyed exceptional opportunities for observing these, and his aptitude for understanding and appreciating foreign customs and ideas lends unusual value to his work, while his picturesqueness of style is especially suited to the Oriental scenes and customs he describes. This interesting work supplements other books on Japan, and aids materially to a more complete understanding of its singularly interesting people.

This book has for its basis a series of letters written from Japan by Miss Bacon between May, 1898, and September, 1899. During those fifteen months she taught in the Peereses School, traveled more or less, and enjoyed the intimate friendship of some Japanese ladies, from whom she learned much regarding Japanese home life and customs. In her book she tells of both home and school life, theaters, traveling, hotels, temples, food, dress, dolls' festivals, of wrestling contests, curio men, fireworks, the climate, earthquakes, the mental characteristics of the people, and numberless other things.

"This book is by far the best and most interesting account of the discovery of the Western World which has yet appeared. The author has not followed in the beaten track of his predecessors in this field of work, but has preferred to deal only with the accounts left by Columbus himself and those directly associated with him in his unique enterprise.

... The book bids fair to rank as the standard popular account of the great Western voyage."—The Churchman, New York.

"This is altogether an interesting book, and a valuable contribution to Columbian literature. . . . Mr. Mac Kie has devoted himself in this volume to the declining years of Columbus, and we are not overpraising his work when we say that it must be found in every well-selected library. The book which Mr. Mac Kie has written is one of the most welcome which has been sent to our table in a long while."—New York Herald.

Miss Merriam spent the summer of 1893 in the Salt Lake Basin, with Mrs. Olive Thorne Miller, who was making some of the observations recorded in her charming book "A Bird-Lover in the West." She found great delight in the country, and this is reflected in her book; she also found much to observe and record concerning the Mormons, their doctrines, and their life. Altogether it is a very interesting book.

Japan—Korea—China. By the Hon. George N. Curzon, M. P., author of "Russia in Central Asia," "Persia," etc. 8vo, with 2 maps and 50 illustrations, of which 21 are full-page	6 00	d.es
"Mr. George Curzon's 'Problems of the Far East' appears at an opportune moment; but, though it deals with China, Japan and Corea, is by no means to be classed with books, hastily thrown together to supply a sudden demand. This volume is the ripe fruit of many years of traveling in the East, and of long study of Eastern questions. Perhaps no Englishman has journeyed so widely in the less known parts of the Oriental world. Certainly no Englishman who has been there at all has shown an equal power of trained observation and of seizing the true points of the great questions there at issue. . . . The book is full of thinking, full of suggestions, full of matter, and is written by a man who can write." . . . G. W. S., in New York Tribune , Aug. 26, 1894.

“When all that is worldly turns to dross around us, books only retain their steady value. When friends grow cold, and the converse of intimates languishes into vapid civility and common-place, these only continue the unaltered countenance of happier days, and cheer us with that true friendship which never deceived hope, nor deserted sorrow.”

My Lady. With numerous illustrations by Helen Maitland Armstrong. Small quarto.....

1 25 lp

"This is a delightful story for adults from the same author who has already charmed the thousands who have read her favorite children's stories, 'Sweet William,' 'Prince Tip Top,' etc. It is a fine example of the power to tell a tale of tender love in pure Saxon English. Recounting the fortunes of French refugees to England in the days of the Revolution of '93 and of Bonaparte, it affords glimpses of life both in England and France. The English nurse, who devotes her whole heart and life to the young heroine, and the young French marquis, whose love for the latter is so great and unselfish that he hides it on discovering that she loves his friend, are finely portrayed. The book is sure to increase its author's fame both by its fascination as a story and by its simple unaffected style.

The secret of the author's success lies in his wonderful sympathy with the aspirations of child-life, his truthful delineation of life among the class of children who act as his object lessons, and his avoidance of anything that would have a tendency to pander to any unhealthy taste. This new volume will rank among his best.

For Young Americans. By Elbridge S. Brooks, author of "Historic Boys," etc. Profusely illustrated. Size 9¼ x 7¼ inches, buckram binding..... 1 50 p.so

This is a book that bids fair to be one of the most popular juveniles ever issued in this country. It tells in attractive story-form what every American boy and girl ought to know about the Government, the functions of the President, the Senate, the House, and the Supreme Court; the duties of the different Cabinet officers and the work of the various departments—how state, municipal and town governments are carried on, and what are the duties and responsibilities of an American citizen.

Anna Green Winslow, a bright girl of twelve, was sent to Boston from her home in Cumberland, Nova Scotia, in 1771, to be "finished." While in Boston she kept a diary, which naturally contained interesting items about her cloaks, bonnets, and other apparel; about Sunday sermons and Thursday lectures; and, much more to her liking, parties and dances. Miss Earle, who is an expert in old New England life and customs, furnishes an interesting preface and many helpful notes, which, with the illustrations, make the book peculiarly and unusually attractive.

This is the story of Louisbourg, that Key of Empire, which, owing to the consequences of its fall, is one of the most notable of the world's dead cities. Like a nightmare the elaborate stronghold lay upon Englishman's Haven and like a nightmare it vanished. Founded, fortified, captured, and destroyed all within a lifetime, its history would be sufficiently remarkable even without the prospect of the new town's future.

Famous Leaders Among Men.

By Sarah K. Bolton. With portraits of Napoleon, Bismarck, Wendell Phillips, Thomas Arnold, Charles Kingsley, and others. 12mo, cloth, uniform with previous volumes.....

1 50 p. 80

Mrs. Bolton adds to her gallery of pen portraits another series, including Napoleon, Lord Nelson, Gen. Sherman, Bunyan, Beecher, Spurgeon, Kingsley, Phillips Brooks, Thomas Arnold, Wendell Phillips. Having great contrast in her choice of subjects, some being military, others belonging to the church militant, she succeeds with even more than her usual skill in presenting to the young inspiring and encouraging sketches of character. She dwells on the educational side of her subject, but she avoids anything like pedantry, and she refrains from didactic preaching, but lets her array of facts, entertainingly presented, bring the lesson which she desires to inculcate. Hence her popularity and wide influence for good.

Tudor Jenks, the author of "The Century World's Fair Book for Boys and Girls," and one of the most popular story writers of St. Nicholas, has gathered his well-known fanciful tales into this handsomely illustrated volume of "Imaginations." Nineteen stories in all are included in the book, among them such old favorites as "The Astrol-oger's Niece," "The Dragon's Story," "A Duel in a Desert," "Little Plunkett's Cousin," "Professor Chipmunk's Surprising Adventures," etc. This volume, with its bright cover and its entertaining stories, should be one of the most popular of Christmas books—a splendid gift for any boy or girl.

By Edith M. Thomas, author of "Fair Shadow Land," etc. With illustrations by Katharine Pyle. Bound in a cover ornamented with birds and flowers, designed by Miss Margaret Armstrong. Crown 8vo.....

1 50 p.se

Miss Thomas has written a book of very attractive poems for young folks. They have the rare merit of addressing youthful readers on themes and in a manner which cannot fail to interest and delight them, and at the same time they are genuinely poetical. They are lyrical, yet have so much meaning and imagination as to put them infinitely above the jingles which are too frequently offered as poetry for young persons. Several of these poems have never before been printed, but were written expressly for this volume, and the variety, humor, gaiety, freshness, and poetic charm of all give the book an unusual value. Its excellent illustrations and the attractiveness of the book, as well as the rare charm of the poems, should make it an uncommonly acceptable gift-book.

In the Heart of the Rockies.

A Story of Adventure in Colorado. By G. A. Henty. With 8 full-page illustrations by G. A. Hindley. Crown 8vo, beautifully bound, olive edges

A stirring story of adventure in the early days of the Far West, before the country was open to the whites. The hero, Tom Wade, is an English boy who comes to America to join an uncle in the West. His life there is marked by a succession of daring adventures with Indians and hair-breadth escapes. Coming safely through all, Tom and his uncle finally discover a gold mine and return to England with ample fortunes.

By Jeanne Schultz, author of "The Story of Colette," "Straight On," etc. With illustrations by Tofani. 8vo.....	1 00	ts
--	------	----

The charmingly simple quality and refined humor of the author of "Colette" has never been more happily illustrated than in this picturesque story of a girl and her boy friends—a story which grown people as well as children will read with keen delight.

Magic Illustrated and Explained.

By Arthur Good. A series of 200 amusing, popular, scientific experiments meant for the recreation of old and young. 165 fine illustrations. Square 12mo, gilt back and side.....	1 25	ld
--	------	----

Many of these are simple pastimes, others possess a really scientific character, while the whole of these experiments may be performed without any special apparatus whatever. This entertaining book, written in language that every one can understand, gives the best answer to the so often repeated question, "What shall we do to-night?"

Man who Married the Moon, The.

Tee Wahn Folk Stories. By Charles F. Lummis. Illustrated by George Wharton Edwards. 12mo, 230 pages, cloth.....	1 50	p.sc
---	------	------

The author of the book has lived for five years among the Pueblo Indians of New Mexico, learning their language and customs, and in the long winter evenings listening to the tales the old men tell to the boys gathered about them—wonderful stories of "The Antelope Boy," "The Ants that Pushed on the Sky," "The Man Who Wouldn't Keep Sunday," "The Town of the Snake Girls," etc. These stories Mr. Lummis has written out for the boys and girls of America just as the old Indians told them. There are thirty stories altogether, not including the one which gives title to the book; and there are pictures too—many pictures of the strange people and animals about which these stories are told.

Mate of the "Mary Ann," The.

By Sophie Swett. Illustrated, 12mo. 1 25 ll
 Miss Swett's stories are of the kind which every healthy-minded boy and girl likes, while at the same time they are such as wise parents delight to see their children read.
 Both boys and girls will find this new story most attractive, and will follow with interest the fortunes of the Mate of the "Mary Ann," and of the brother whose welfare she has so much at heart.

Search for Andrew Field, The.

By Everett T. Tomlinson. Illustrated with 8 full-page drawings by A. B. Shute. 12mo..... I 50 p.se

The object of the author of this volume is to give the younger people an insight into the conditions of the times of 1812, a history of that war and a glimpse at the results.

The author is thoroughly familiar with the territory in which the scene is laid and many are the adventures, perils and difficulties met during the search. Andrew Field and his friends are many American boys with a love for their country, and the story is full of life and spirit, manly in tone and free from "slang," conveying much historical information and many lessons of manliness and courage.

"The author seeks to throw an entirely new light upon the hitherto much discussed problem. Pen pictures of Columbus, Cortez, Francisco, Pizarro, Coronado, Docampo, De Soto, and many others of the early explorers and pioneers are graphically drawn. From Mr. Lummis there is learned more of the true personality and environment of these men than is generally known. The conquest of Peru is admirably described, giving the reader a keener insight than the average history furnishes. Altogether the book is an instructive, well-written history of comparatively unexplored fields."—The Boston Journal.

- Theresa at San Domingo.
From the French of Madame Fresneau. Illustrated, 12mo. 1 00 ne
"The negro insurrection at San Domingo in 1789 has been commemorated in this capital story for children by Madame Fresneau. It is written in that bright, entertaining way which children always like, and in addition to the vivid historic background there are given some excellent descriptions of life in the West Indies, and of their birds, animals, forests, etc."—The American Bookseller.
- *Three Boys on an Electrical Boat.
By John Trowbridge. 16mo. 1 00 ts
This book is a part of the record and romantic conjecture of the present electrical era. It appeals powerfully to boys and all who are fond of rapid and exciting adventure, for the succession of striking incidents, accidents, and mysterious passages is almost uninterrupted. It also appeals to all who are interested in what is known of electricity, and the boundless possibilities of its applications and achievements. Altogether it is a book of uncommon interest.

- Through Thick and Thin.
By Molly Elliott Seawell. Comprising a soldier story, "Through Thick and Thin," and a sailor story, "The Midshipmen's Mess." Illustrated, 12mo. 1 50 p.so
No more delightful delineator of life in the camp and life afloat than Miss Seawell writes to-day for young people. Her stories are strong, breezy, helpful and inspiring, and it is hard to tell whether her mischievous but manly middies, or her restless but chivalrous cadets, are her best creations. Both, in fact, are equally good and equally attractive.
- *Through the Wilds.
A record of sport and adventure in the forests of New Hampshire and Maine. By Capt. Charles A. J. Farrar. Profusely illustrated with over 300 original engravings. 8vo, illuminated board covers. 1 75 p.se
Handsomely bound in cloth, black and gold 2 50 p.es
A fascinating narrative of the adventures of a party of young men traveling through the woods of Maine and New Hampshire. Stories of their camp life, fishing, shooting, etc. The author was himself an ardent sportsman, as well as a popular and vigorous writer.

Timothy Dolé.

By Juniata Salisbury. With 25 or 30 illustrations from drawings and pen and ink sketches. 16mo Retail. Not.
$1 25 11

The title gives no clue to the character of the book, but the reader who begins the first chapter will not stop until he has finished the whole. The book is not of the goody-goody order. Although written with a purpose, and conveying a moral lesson, this feature is not obtrusive. It is a wholesome and vigorous book that boys and girls, and parents as well, will read and enjoy.

Toinette's Philip.

By Mrs. C. V. Jamison, author of "Lady Jane." Illustrated by Birch..... 1 50 p.sc

The scene of this book, like "Lady Jane," is laid in New Orleans, where we find Philip selling flowers in company with Dea, the daughter of a poor French sculptor, and Lillybell, a comical little pickaninny, whose "Ma-nny done name him for his two little sisters wot's dade." Later, when Philip is adopted by a wealthy artist and his wife, the scene of the story shifts to New York. What happens in his new home, how Philip runs away, and how at last the mystery that has enveloped his life is explained, is told in Mrs. Jamison's own entertaining way, the principal characters and events being charmingly illustrated by Birch.

Topsys and Turvys.

A book of colored pictures, by P. S. Newell. Oblong. Boards. 1 00 ts

These Topsy-Turvy books by Peter Newell are the funniest books you ever saw. It is hard to describe them because there never was anything like them before. Mr. Newell, the artist who designed them, hit upon a new idea in picture books, and the Topsy-Turvy books are the result. "Boys and girls like pictures," said Mr. Newell to himself, "and they like surprises. Why not make a book that will combine the two?" So he set to work and made "Topsys & Turvys" (the first book), which seems at first sight an ordinary picture book, but turn any of the pictures upside-down and straightway you have another picture. "Topsy-Turvy No. 2" is like the first Topsy-Turvy book, only larger, and in addition to the 36 colored illustrations there are 34 more printed in black and white.

When Molly was Six.

A book for children. By Eliza Orne White. With colored cover design and other illustrations by Katharine Pyle. Square 16mo. (In press.)

A very delightful book for little girls. It consists of twelve connected stories, one for each month of Molly's seventh year. The incidents are not impossible, and the range of experiences is not too narrow. As part of these, Molly goes to the country, and to the seashore, has a new doll and a tortoise-shell cat, struggles with the severe problem of spending ten cents all at once and as she pleases, has a happy Thanksgiving Day, and a wonderful out-door Christmas. The stories cannot fail to charm children, while their simplicity and humor will delight older readers.

The great demand for Mrs. Whitney's books has suggested the advisability of remodeling some of them and bringing them into better form. Accordingly it has been decided to bring out all her stories in somewhat smaller volumes and at a lower price, which should give them a new lease of popular favor. Very few stories by American writers enjoy so wide a popularity as do Mrs. Whitney's, and it may safely be said that no stories are more wholesome and more admirable in tone and spirit than hers.

This book is devoted to pretty "Little Columbia's" gowns and pleasures, and contains twelve fac-similes of water color sketches by Miss Tucker, one for each month in the year. Each picture is accompanied by some charming verses by Miss Tucker. In these pictures, Little Columbia is shown, dressed for the various pastimes to which she devotes herself during the year. For example, the sketch for June shows her in her tennis costume, the one for July as she celebrates the Fourth, and in August she is starting off with her net to catch crabs.

A YEAR OF PAPER DOLLS.

*Year of Paper Dolls, A.

By Miss E. S. Tucker. With the designs as loose sheets, in a box with bright cover in colors. Each set.....

75	de

The most beautiful and unique novelty for children ever published. Similar in general idea to the popular "Brownie Dolls," which have had such a great success. With twelve designs of children in dresses appropriate to the different months of the year, front and back, in many colors, and so made that they can be cut out as paper dolls. One of these sets of dolls will furnish amusement to a child for months. One entirely new feature is that with these dolls come a sheet of calendar dates. The dates of each month can be cut out and pasted on the doll representing that month, the twelve figures making a calendar that will last through the year. This new and interesting feature makes the dolls a source of instruction as well as pleasure to children.

Palmer Cox's delightful little "Brownies" hardly need an introduction to a public who have for years laughed at the queer pranks of these amusing little people, and have spent many pleasant hours in picking out the Dude, the Irishman, the Dutchman, and other famous characters of Brownieland. Few books for children have been so successful as these Brownie Books, of which more than one hundred thousand have been sold. "The Brownies Round the World," the latest of the series, describes in picture and verse the adventures of the Brownie band abroad—their trip across the Atlantic, and their visits to the principal countries of Europe, Asia and Africa.

 SAME. Handsomely bound in cloth, full gilt, with chromo side, full gilt edges. 1 75 p.ps

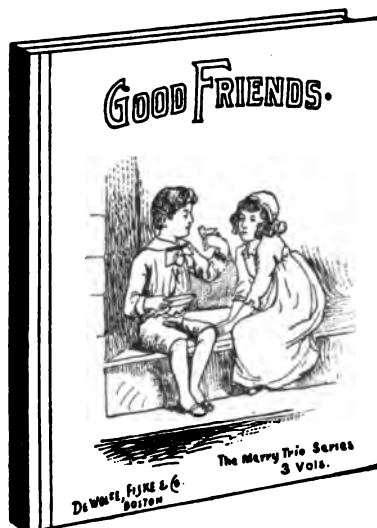

This year's volume is printed better, and on a finer quality of paper than ever before. This, the acknowledged king of all juvenile books published in the world, both as to merit and amount of circulation, is fully up to its standard of excellence this year. In fact, it seems to grow better every year, and is eagerly looked forward to by tens of thousands of young people as the holiday season approaches. It contains over 400 pages, and 200 original illustrations by great English artists, and is not only a most interesting but very instructive book, and its healthy moral tone has always been acknowledged.

In this new volume of the most popular series of books of travel and story for American children ever issued, the reader is shown, with graphic pen and pencil, some of the wonders of the recent great world's fair at Chicago. "The White City" was an affair of such magnitude, of such lasting importance, that children, even of an older growth, may constantly draw new lessons for many years to come. Even those most familiar with its main features will find this volume by the popular editor of The Youth's Companion both instructive and entertaining.

STANDARD TWELVEMOS.

$0 50 d.50

This game affords amusing recreation and incidentally teaches American History. It consists of fifty-two cards divided in equal number into the National Colors—Red, White and Blue. The rules are quite simple—eight being sufficient to explain its object, which is to count the historic date “1776.” While the game is very amusing and interesting, the knowledge of our National History which one almost unconsciously acquires is of the utmost value, and could not be gathered otherwise without long and laborious research. This result is accomplished by devoting a color to a certain phase of our history—Red cards containing the Diplomatic and Military History of the United States, and the White the Constitutional, Legal and Political History; while the Blue shows the Social and Industrial Progress. Each card bears a well-engraved and accurate portrait of one of the presidents.

15 And, behold, I am with thee, and will keep thee in all places whither thou goest, and will bring thee again into this land; for I will not leave thee, until I have done that which I have spoken to thee of.	15 And Jacob told Rachel that he was her father's brother, and that he was Rebekah's son; and she ran and told her father.	15 And it came to pass, when Leah heard the tidings of Jacob his sister's son, that he ran to meet him, and embraced him, and kissed him, and brought him to his house. And he told Laban all these things.
16 ¶ And Jacob awaked out of his sleep, and he said, Surely the LORD is in this place; and I knew it not.	16 And he said to him, Surely thou art my bone and my flesh. And he abode with him the space of a month.	16 ¶ And Laban said unto Jacob, Because thou art my brother, shouldst thou therefore serve me for nought? tell me, what shalt thy wages be?
17 And he was afraid, and said, How dreadful is this place! this is none other but the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven.
18 And Jacob rose up early in the morning, and took the stone that he had put for his pillows, and set it up for a pillar, and poured oil upon the top of it.

ST. JOHN, III.

with Nicodemus.

19 Jesus answered and said unto them, Destroy this temple, and in three days I will raise it up.

20 Then said the Jews, Forty and six years was this temple in building, and wilt thou rear it up in three days?

21 But he spake of the temple of his body.

22 When therefore he was risen from the dead, his disciples remembered that he had said this unto them; and they believed the scripture, and the word which Jesus had said.

4 Nicodemus saith unto him, How can a man be born when he is old? can he enter the second time into his mother's womb, and be born?

5 Jesus answered, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God.

6 That which is born of the flesh is flesh; and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit.

7 Marvel not that I said unto thee, Ye must be born again.

NEW EDITION.

THE GENUINE "OXFORD" TEACHERS' BIBLE,

WITH ILLUSTRATIONS IN THE HELPS AND WITH NEW HELPS
AND A MAGNIFICENT NEW SERIES OF MAPS

Specially prepared to illustrate the geography of Palestine and the adjacent countries, from the earliest times to the destruction of Jerusalem, and embodying the most recent discoveries down to March, 1893.

The Most Complete Biblical Compilation of the Nineteenth Century.

This well-known volume in its present form has lost nothing of its former utility, but is further enriched with new authentic information of every description, arranged with the closest attention to facility of reference. Thus enlarged, the book has become by far the most instructive and exhaustive compendium of every kind of information essential to Biblical study, and will be found an invaluable companion for every minister, teacher, and private student.

In every division of the work, frequent reference has been made to the Revised Version, a complete knowledge of which is universally regarded as invaluable and indispensable to Bible students.

Containing the following:

Helps to the Study of the Bible.

Concordance with context, over 40,000 references. Index to Persons, Places and Subjects, 16,000 references. Scripture Atlas, with Index. Glossary of Bible Words. Bible Calendar. Dictionary of Proper Names, with their Meanings and Pronunciations, Summary and Analysis of the Old and New Testaments. Exhaustive Articles on Biblical History, Geography, Topography, Natural History, Ethnology, Botany, Chronology, Music and Poetry. A Complete Harmony of the Gospels, Tables of Parables, Prophecies, Miracles, Prayers, Money, Weights and Measures, Jewish Sects and Orders, etc.

Containing in Addition to the Helps enumerated

SIXTY-FOUR FULL-PAGE PLATES

REPRODUCING IN FACSIMILE AUTHENTIC DOCUMENTS, MONUMENTS, PICTURES, AND PORTRAITS, ILLUSTRATING THE HISTORY OF THE OLD AND NEW TESTAMENTS.

THE ILLUSTRATIONS.

The illustrations form a distinctive feature of the new edition, and present a novel and valuable departure, never before attempted in works of this description on a scale so full and complete. They have been selected and described by E. Maunde Thompson, D.C.L., LL.D., Principal Librarian of the British Museum; A. S. Murray, LL.D., F. S. A., Keeper of Greek and Roman Antiquities, British Museum; and E. A. Wallis Budge, Litt. D., F. S. A., Acting Assistant Keeper of Egyptian and Assyrian Antiquities, British Museum. Special care has been taken to insert only authentic copies of objects which bear upon matters recorded in Holy Scripture. To each illustration is added a short description, supplying dates and facts.

Jer. 35. 2.

54 The sons of Sāl'mā; Bēth'-lā-hēm, and the Nē-tōph'-g-thites, 2 At'-g-rōth, the house of Jō'āb, and half of the Mā-nā'heth-ites, the Zō'-rites.

55 And the families of the scribes which dwelt at Jā'bēz; the Tī'rath-ites, the Shīm'-gath-ites, and Sū'-chath-ites. These are the 'Kēn-ites that came of Hē'māth, the father of the house of 'Rē'shāb.

CHAPTER 3.

1 The sons of David. 10 His line to Zedekiah.
17 The successors of Jeconiah.

NOW these were the sons of Dā'-vid, which were born unto him in Hē'bron; the firstborn 'Am nōn, of Ā-hin'-q-am the 'Jēz'-el-ites; the second 'Dān-jel, of Ab'-gail the Cār-mel-ites:

2 The third, Ab'-q-lōm the son of Mā'-gachah the daughter of Tāl'māi king of Gē'shur: the fourth, Ad'-ōn'-jah the son of Hāg'-gith:

3 The fifth, Shēph'-g-tī'ah of Ab'-i-tāl: the sixth, It'h'-rā-m by 'Ēg'-lah his wife.

4 These six were born unto him in Hē'bron; and 'there he reigned seven years and six months: and 'in Jē-rū'sh-lēm he reigned thirty and three years.

5 And these were born unto him in Jē-rū'sh-lēm; 'Shīm'-g-a, and Shō'-bāb, and Nā'than, and 'Sōl'-o-mon, four, of 'Bāth'-shū'-a the daughter of 'Am-mī-el:

6 Ib'hār also, and 'Ē-līsh'-g-mā, and

19 And the sons of Pē-dā'-jah were, Ze-rūb'-bā-bēl, and Shīm'-g-i: and the sons of Ze-rūb'-bā-bēl; Mā'-ahū'l'am, and Hān'-g-nī'ah, and Shēl'-q-mīth their sister:

20 And Hā'-shū'-bah, and Ū'hel, and Bēr'-g-chī'ah, and Hā'-g-dī'ah, Jū'-shāb-hō'sēd, five.

21 And the sons of Hān'-g-nī'ah; Pāl'-g-tī'ah, and Jē'-sā'-jah: the sons of Rēph'-g-tī'ah, the sons of Ā'-nan, the sons of Ū'-bā-dī'ah, the sons of Shēch'-g-nī'ah.

22 And the sons of Shēch'-g-nī'ah; Shēm'-g-i'ah: and the sons of Shēm'-g-i'ah; 'Hāt'-tūsh, and Ig'-g-āl, and Bā'-rī'ah, and Nē'-g-rī'ah, and Shā'-phat, six.

23 And the sons of Nē'-g-rī'ah; Ēl'-i-ō'-s-nā-i, and 'Hēz'-e-kī'ah, and Ā'-rī-kam, three.

24 And the sons of Ēl'-i-ō'-s-nā-i were, Hōd'-g-i'ah, and Ē'-lī'-a-shib, and Pāl'-g-i'ah, and Āk'-kūb, and Jō'-hā'-nan, and Dāl'-g-i'ah, and An'-ā-nī, seven.

¹⁷ So all the generations from Ā'brā'hām to Dā'vid are fourteen generations; and from Dā'vid until the carrying away into Bāb'y-lon are fourteen generations; and from the carrying away into Bāb'y-lon unto Christ are fourteen generations.

¹⁸ ¶ Now the ¹ birth of Jē'gus Christ was on this wise: When as his mother Mā'ry was espoused to Jō'seph, before they came together, she was found with child ² of the Hō'ly Ghōst.

¹⁹ Then Jō'seph her husband, being a just man, and not willing ³ to make her a publick example, was minded to put her away privily.

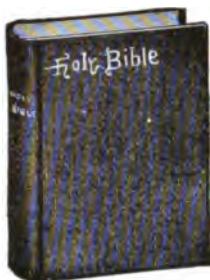

²⁰ But while he thought on these things, behold, the angel of the Lord appeared unto him in a dream, saying, Jō'seph, thou son of Dā'vid, fear not to take unto thee Mā'ry thy wife: ⁴ for that which is ⁴ conceived in her is of the Hō'ly Ghōst.

International Sunday-School Teachers' Bibles.

A NEW BIBLE.

This beautifully printed edition of the Bible, with its new and carefully prepared articles on Bible study, tables and synopses, text books, concordance and maps, forms a library in itself. The Text of this edition has already gained a high reputation for clearness of type and excellence of paper. The topics and arrangement of the helps are new and original. For all Bible students and workers, such articles and tables as "How to study the Bible," by Dr. James Stalker; "The Bible and the Christian Church," by Dr. A. E. Dunning; "Texts for Christian Workers," by Major D. W. Whittle; and "Daily Food," by Rev. R. M. McCheyne, will prove of special value. For Sunday-School Teachers, Dr. John H. Vincent has prepared "The S. S. Teacher's Use of the Bible." The new Maps of Bible Lands have been drawn for this series by Maj. C. R. Conder, the best authority on Scripture Geography.

These are only a few of the special features of these new Helps.

SIZE $4\frac{1}{2} \times 6\frac{3}{8} \times 1\frac{1}{4}$ INCHES.

Special attention is called to this new size in Teachers' Bibles. Its features are:

First. The size of type—larger than nonpareil, as clear as ordinary minion.

Second. Size of book: In dimensions the book is about the usual size of a nonpareil Bible, being thus smaller even than a convenient minion size, giving a larger print in smaller compass than any other Teacher's Bible.

Finger New Testaments.

(1611 Version.)

Brilliant 96mo.

The Greatest Novelty Ever Made in Testaments.

This wonderful specimen of printing and binding exhibits the properties of the famous "Oxford India Paper," and weighs in limp binding about three-quarters of an ounce, is only one inch in width, three and a half inches in length, and one-third of an inch in thickness, yet it contains 552 pages (the whole of the New Testament), in a type which, though necessarily minute, is yet clear, distinct, and perfectly legible.
